Antiaircraft Guns Target of Air Strikes

U.S. Warplanes Continue to Pressure Viet North

SAIGON (AP) - U.S. warplanes kept up heavy pressure on North Vietnam Friday, flying 145 missions after a record 197 strikes the previous day, and a main target was the Communist guns which were shooting at them.

Air Force F105 Thunderchief pilots reported they destroyed at least 17 antiaircraft gun emplacements around the air field and railroad yard at Kep, 38 miles northeast of Hanoi.

Other pilots flew through heavy antiaircraft fire and surface-to-air missiles to hit other military targets and fuel storage areas.

The Communist fire brought down a Navy Skyhawk and the pilot was missing. It was the 636th announced U.S. warplane loss over the North.

Ground fighting continued in one of its periodic lulls, but South Vietnamese military headquarters said three infantry sweeps in the Viet Cong-infested Mekong delta had accounted for a total of 469 enemy dead in nine days.

The Viet Cong struck again at two U.S. military installations near Saigon.

For the second time in 10 days, the Communists unleashed a mortar attack on the base camp of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division's 3rd Brigade at Lai Khe, 30 miles north of Saigon.

The attack Friday night killed one American and wounded eight. A Communist rocket and mortar barrage on the base camp July 27 killed 11 U.S. soldiers and wounded 43.

The U.S. naval base at Nhe Be, eight miles southeast of Saigon, came under Communist recoilless rifle attack early today for the second time in three days.

The Navy said Communists fired eight or nine rounds of 75mm recoilless rifle rounds into the complex, but that only two hit the base. The others landed in the Long Tao river bordering the base, from which Navy patrol boats conduct operations against the Viet Cong in the delta.

The Navy said there were no casualties and only light damage to the facilities. In a heavier mortar and recoilless rifle shelling of the base and a nearby petroleum tank farm Thursday, 27 Americans and six Vietnamese were wounded and 1,000 55-gallon drums of fuel went up in flames.

A U.S. Marine security platoon guarding a bridge south of Da Nang came under heavy Communist attack early today. Two Marines were killed and 14 wounded.

Striking in darkness with small arms, automatic weapons, grenades and mortars, the Communist penetrated the Marine perimeter in two places. Two Marine bunkers were destroyed by what were believed to be 40mm rockets. Communists casualties were not known.

Troops of the U.S. 25th Infantry Division reported destroying a Viet Cong grenade factory 24 miles northwest of Saigon. The Americans found a large underground room containing eight 55-gallon drums containing tools, castings, explosives and other grenade parts.

U.S. B52 bombers flew four missions over South Vietnam Friday, striking three times in the A Shau Valley, near the Laotian border 400 miles north of Saigon.

The command confirmed that American artillery accidentally shot down an ammunition-carrying C7 Caribou transport Thursday as it approached a Special Forces camp west of Quang Ngai City. The plane's three crewmen were killed.

The eight-engine B52 bombers flew four missions over South Vietnam Friday, striking three times in the A Shau Valley, near the Laotian border 400 miles north of Saigon.

A Shau, site of a former U.S. Special Force Green Beret outpost, is the first of many enemy concentration points in South Vietnam on the Ho Chi Minh trail. Intelligence sources report that flat-bed semi-trailers capable of hauling tons of weapons have been spotted in the valley recently.

The area has come under almost daily bombing since the North Vietnamese overran the Special Forces camp early last year. The raids Friday were aimed at enemy base camps, storage areas and fortifications.

The B52s also flew one mission against a training center and tunnel complex in Long Khanh Province, 50 miles northeast of Saigon.

In air raids against North Vietnam, F105 Thunderchiefs based in Thailand attacked a rail yard 30 miles north of Hanoi Friday and pilots reported damaging 20 railroad cars and destroying 300 feet of track.

Phantom jet pilots reported silencing 17 antiaircraft batteries around Kep airfield northeast of Hanoi, while Thunderchiefs struck at railroad yards nearby.

Navy pilots from the carriers Oriskany and Constellation said they destroyed or damaged 21 trucks, 21 boats and seven bridges.

A U.S. spokesman announced that four U.S. combat plane losses over the North not previously disclosed bought the total of such losses for the war to 635. American aircraft losses from all causes in the war on both sides of the border mounted to 2,511 - 1,549 planes and 962 helicopters.

Farmer Killed in Accident

A farmer was injured fatally in a single car accident Friday at 11:15 p.m. on highway N, a half-mile south of Illmo, when his car overturned.

Leslie Eifert, 56, route one, Illmo, driving a 1953 Chevrolet, was coming down hill rounding a curve, when his vehicle left the road.

He was taken to the Bisplinghoff Funeral Home in Illmo.

Eifert was born in Scott City, Feb. 10, 1911, son of Daniel Eifert and Mrs. Pauline Eifert.

Surviving are one son, Kenneth Eifert, Cape Girardeau; two brothers, David Eifert, Scott City, and William Eifert, St. Louis; four sisters, Mrs. Elmer Uelsmann, Illmo, Mrs. Charles Glueck, Jackson, Mrs. A.E. Landgraf, Cape Girardeau and Miss Elsie Eifert, St. Louis; and two grandchildren.

Gasoline War Cease Fire

No shots were fired among competing gasoline dealers Friday, but the gas war, which ended Thursday, broke out again today.

Major brand dealers are now selling regular for 28.9 cents per gallon and premium for 32.9 cents per gallon.

Independent dealers are selling regular for 26.9 cents per gallon and premium for 29.9 cents per gallon.

Independent dealers seem to be running the gas war. It broke out about four weeks ago, when three independent dealers undercut the going prices charged by other independents. The remaining independent dealers then undercut them, and the majors lowered their prices.

The close of the price war announced Wednesday, came after a meeting of independents, who agreed on the new prices.

However, one independent decided to keep his prices at the 26.9 and 28.9. Another independent then dropped his price first one cent then two cents per gallon on Thursday and Friday.

Today all the independents lowered their prices and the majors followed suit.

A long established independent gasoline dealer said today that the price now charged is expected to remain for "some time." Any further increases or decreases are expected to be gradual.

The present prices are not so low that anybody can't make a living, but they're not making the margin of profit that some would like, he said.

Taylor, Clifford Back From Far East Mission

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential envoys Clark Clifford and Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor returned from their Southeast Asian trip today reporting they found general agreement among the allies on how to push ahead with the Vietnam war.

"A great degree of concensus," was how Taylor summed up the attitude of allied leaders on which he was slated to report to President Johnson this afternoon.

"There was unanimous agreement among all the allies that the bombing should be carried on at its present level or possibly at an increased level," Clifford added.

And there was no reluctance expressed about sending more troops to Vietnam from other allied countries, Taylor said, "because we were not asking for more troops."

Johnson dispatched the two senior presidential advisers to talk with the chiefs of the countries who have forces fighting the Communists in Vietnam. Their two-week trip took them to South Vietnam, Thailand, Australia, New Zealand and South Korea.

Taylor is the former U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam and Clifford, a Washington lawyer, has been an adviser to Johnson and other Democratic presidents.

While little concrete information has been given out concerning the Clifford-Taylor mission, Johnson apparently sent his senior confidants to talk with the leaders of the nations with troops in South Vietnam to:

-Check on the progress of the military and political-economic campaigns in South Vietnam.

- Give the allied chiefs Johnson's latest views on the Vietnam effort.

- Receive the views of the allied leaders and relay them to Johnson.

- Survey prospects for the next Vietnam summit parley. The last such summit gathering was at Manila last October. The next one is expected in Seoul or Bangkok this fall.

Washington sources said the outlook for peace negotiations with North Vietnam was also within the wide scope of the discussions by Clifford and Taylor in the allied capitals. But they said there was no talk of a dramatic new peace offensive.

Family Decides To Sell After Water Dispute

MATTHEWS-- The R. E. Hartline family have advertised their home to "colored" people only. They also are putting up a second house and eight lots for sale on the same basis.

It acted after their city water was cut off last night. The family had refused to pay a water bill for three months.

Members of the family said the refusal was because a broken water line caused dirty water to come into their property.

There are no Negroes living in the community now.

City officials were notified of the broken line, according to the family, but it went unrepaired until recently.

The family carried their water supply from a church a block away while the main was broken.

Wyatt Store Burglarized

WYATT -- About $150 in merchandise was stolen from the Wyatt Mercantile Company Thursday night, Sheriff W. J. "Pedro" Simmons reported.

Items taken included watches, knives and clothing. About $50 worth of merchandise has been recovered.

Witnesses saw three Negroes dropping merchandise along the side of a road. Part of the merchandise recovered was found in a lard can which had about two inches of water in it, indicating that it had been taken before the heavy rain Thursday night.

Other merchandise found was dry, indicating that it had been taken after the rain storm. Simmons said the burglars probably had entered the store more than once Thursday night.

Three juveniles were picked up for questioning and one is being held.

Jewish Society Gives Assist to Delmo

NORTH LILBOURN -- "It is the first school summer vacation we have had where we feel we have accomplished something, and one we will remember for many years," Paul Kleinbaum said.

Kleinbaum, 16, of Rutherford, N.J., is one of 18 eastern high school juniors and seniors participating in the American Jewish Society for Service project this summer in five Southeast Missouri counties.

The teenagers are repairing and repainting houses at Delmo housing projects in Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Dunklin and Stoddard counties.

The Delmo Corporation is a non-profit philanthropic organization that seeks to pilot needed projects in Missouri for which federal funds are available. It is headquartered at Lilbourn.

The AJSS is an independent national organization started in 1950 to give Jews and those of other faiths an opportunity to perform humanitarian service in fulfillment of the highest teachings of Judaism.

The society conducts voluntary work service summer camps to enable young people to live their faith by serving others.

The group, which arrived here July 3, is one of three AJSS groups working in the United States this summer.

The other two groups are working at Lackawanna, N. Y., and Crown Point, N. M.

At Lackawanna, near Buffalo, the teenagers assist in an urban renewal project. At Crown Point they are helping develop a Navajo Indian recreation project to increase tourism.

Each group is composed of nine boys and nine girls. An unusual aspect of the society's project is that each teenager pays $300 for the privilege of working in the summer program.

Since coming to Southeast Missouri's Bootheel, the volunteers have worked at five Delmo housing units.

At North Lilbourn they painted eight houses, replaced siding on other houses and made other carpentry repairs.

At Wyatt they painted five houses and fixed the roof on another. They have also begun painting houses at Wardell.

Ed Cohen, a social studies teacher at Long Beach, N.Y., and a member of AJSS, is serving as director of the project in the Bootheel.

"In times of riots and demonstrations, this is our solution for young people interested in action," Cohen said. "We feel that a peace corps service is the most constructive and meaningful at this point.

"Our purpose is to give youngsters opportunity to put Jewish ethics and values to work. There are other goals, but primarily the service is aimed at helping a person to help himself."

Cohen said the youngsters also involve in their work those people whom they help.

"One of the root problems is the image the impoverished have of themselves, and in order to motivate them you have to orient them to self respect," he said.

"Most of the people we work with don't have much community spirit and don't work together; they simply weren't organized to do this sort of thing," he said.

Educational, informational discussions about Southeast Missouri are arranged for the volunteers by their sponsor, the Delmo Corporation.

Speakers have familiarized them with problems of farming in the Bootheel, problems of the National Youth Corps and the poverty problems of this primarily agrarian part of the state.

Other learning experiences are provided in such activities as the Head Start program in North Lilbourn, where they volunteer their services one day a week.

Cohen pointed out that the youngsters' experiences of working with low-income families have had a great impact upon their thinking.

"They have thought, until now, that when inequities exist the problems can be solved by changing things in Congress," he said. "But they're finding out that just because something clicks in Washington, D. C., it doesn't mean that the same thing will click in Lilbourn, Mo., and produce miraculous results.

"They aren't so convinced that a crash program is the answer, as opposed to long-term working out of a number of interrelated problems, such as education."

The volunteers work from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. five days a week.

When the youngsters were asked why they pay $300 plus traveling and recreational expense for the privilege of working, they generally agreed that the money has been well spent.

"We are here because we feel we have to help people less fortunate than we," Kleinberg remarked. "We are all Jewish and we are learning to live with other Jewish youngsters."

Stanley Klein of New York City, one of the group counselors and a graduate student at Northwestern University in Chicago, said that one purpose of the AJSS projects is to emphasize the role of Jews in history:

"Jews see it as their calling to help others. Because they have been persecuted throughout their history, they are supposed to understand the problems of others. They want to help those in need."

Another youngster said that he will return to New York with a new awareness of how others live.

In appointing out the problems the volunteers have faced, Klein said the biggest problem was in lack of communication with those whom the volunteers are helping.

While the volunteers repair houses, their occupants oftentimes remain indoors.

"It's hard to work without knowing who you are working for," Aline Mayer, 16, of Yonkers, N. H., said.

The youngsters reported they did enjoy the response they received at the Circle City Delmo project.

Residents served them a home-cooked buffet dinner.

The youngsters are especially proud of a project which they initiated themselves at North Lilbourn. They donated $150 of their own money toward a $400 recreation project at the North Lilbourn community center.

Included in the project is a paved basketball court. Land also is being cleared for a baseball field.

Explaining why they have undertaken this extra project, Klein said: "Paint gets dirty and shingles will fall off. We wanted to build something that will last."

Five Killed, 65 Hurt in Truck

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — A flatbed truck carrying a YMCA youngsters' club home from a day on a Pacific Ocean beach somersaulted out of control Friday on the Nimitz Freeway, killing five and injuring 65 others.

Larry Fink, newly sworn in California High Patrol officer who saw the accident, declared: "I didn't realize how bad it was until I got up to the cab of the truck and all I saw was a mound of bodies."

Appeal to Support Rodeo Gets Response

An initial purchase of 100 Jaycee Bootheel rodeo tickets was made today by J. Ernest Harper, manager of McKnight Keaton Grocery Co.

Some of the tickets will be given to employes. The remainder will be given to customers who buy a certain amount of the firm's products, Harper said.

The 100 tickets were ordered today in response to a Jaycee letter sent to Sikeston merchants urging support of the annual rodeo. The show opens Thursday.

The letter explains that the purpose of the event is to stimulate activity within the community and surveys have proved it has succeeded.

However, due to bad weather in past years, the rodeo is now in debt to the tune of $11,000. Unless this year is profitable, the event may be discontinued, the letter stated.

Profits from rodeos in the past paid for the football stadium and other civic improvements.

The letter closes with a message uring promotion among the merchants' employes and customers.

Harper said today he hopes to be able to purchase more tickets later, and expressed the hope that other merchants will follow the example and support the rodeo.

Open Verdict In Inquest of Tetley Death

IRONTON - A coroner's jury returned an open verdict at an inquest last night into the death of Robert E. Tetley, 63, of Oran.

The jury's verdict stated that Tetley had died from a gunshot wound in the tempie fired by a person or persons unknown.

Tetley was found dead Tuesday morning at a farmhouse east of Belleview. He had been shot twice with a .22 caliber gun.

Edward Howard, 61, of St. Louis has been charged with first degree murder in the death. At his preliminary hearing Wednesday the magistrate judge asked that Howard be given a psychiatric examination at the state hospital at Fulton to determine whether he is sane and can stand trial on the charges.

Coin Machines Burglarized

A breakin at Ferrell Auto Salvage Co., 1615 West Malone, was discovered by Bob Hileman, an employe, at 7:30 a.m. today, police reported.

An undetermined amount of money was taken from a vending machine and a cash register. Cigarettes also were taken from the vending machine.

Investigating officer Isaiah Dunn said the thieves apparently entered through a window on the south side of the building by breaking the window pane and unlatching the lock.

The burglar or burglars apparently left through the front door.

The theft of a red Speed Mobile go-kart with a red checkered flag tied to the seat was reported to police at 2 p.m. Friday.

Bill Paxton, Oran, told police the vehicle valued at $45 was taken from a room on the south side of the building that houses the Davis Coin-a-matic Laundry, 867 West Malone.

Ike Rushed To Hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, stricken ill at his Gettysburg, Pa., farm, was flown by helicopter to Walter Reed hospital today.

The 76-year-old five-star general arrived at the hospital shortly before noon, clad in pajamas and bathrobe.

There was no immediate word on the nature of his ailment.

Eisenhower was helped from the helicopter by a hospital aide and walked from the landing pad to a nearby car for the short trip to the hospital.

Eisenhower was hospitalized last May for eight days following an attack of gastroenteritis — an inflammation of the lining of the stomach and small intestine.

Since his recovery, he made one trip back to the hospital, a 42-hour stay last July 10-12 for what was described as a routine physical examination and dental work. Doctors said then he was in good shape.

Officers held a teen-aged son of the couple but refused to discuss the case beyond the facts that the three were killed with a .22 - caliber rifle early today.

Victims were Dr. Gordon Wolcott, 56; his wise, Elizabeth, 43; and their daughter, also named Elizabeth.

The Wolcotts have a 15-year-old son. Police said the youth was taken before a county judge and advised of his constitutional rights.

Ten Crewmen Escape Unharmed From Towboat

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)— Rescue craft picked up 10 crewmen from the Mississippi River near here Friday night after their towboat Ouachita exploded and sank.

None of the crewmen, who fled the burning vessel in lifeboats only moments before the sinking, were injured.

The towboat was pulling six barges loaded with some 12,000 tons of rock for revetment and dike work.

Crewmen reported the Ouachita erupted into flames shortly after an explosion was heard in the towboat's engine room. The cause was undetermined.

Coast Guard and harbor patrol rescue units rushed to the scene and assisted in rescuing crewmen and securing the six barges on the Mississippi side of the river.

The accident occurred 17 miles south of the Memphis-Arkansas bridge.

The $300,000 towboat was owned by Hillman Logan of Greenville, Miss., and was 15 years old.

Logan said the Ouachita left Caruthersville, Mo., early Friday.

Tugboat Capt. Elwood Haney and most of his nine crewmen were from Greenville, Logan said.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Holidays generally are a time for gaiety and fun. An exception is Supplication Day, celebrated only in the Virgin Islands.

This is the day that residents of the Virgin Islands go to church and pray that their islands will not be hit by a hurricane.

Their prayers have been answered every year since 1932. Other places haven't been so lucky.

Virgin Islanders regard July 25 - Supplication Day - as the beginning of the hurricane season. Actually, hurricanes have been known to occur in every month but April. The U.S. Weather Bureau regards their main period as running from June 1 to Nov. 15, with September the most dangerous month.

A hurricane is a whirling storm measuring several hundred miles across, with winds blowing at 75 miles an hour or more. The center is a calm area, called the "eye", that measures about 20 miles across and has little wind or cloudiness. The fury of the hurricane begins at the edge of the eye - and it is fury.

Towering cloud masses produce heavy rains. The terrible winds build up killer waves; waves that even the strongest ship would be lucky to survive. Just 10 years ago Germany proclaimed a state of national mourning when a training ship, full of merchant marine cadets, was hit by a hurricane and went down with 80 men and boys - virtually her entire crew.

Hurricane winds usually are not more than 100 miles an hour, but sometimes they may blow up to almost 200 miles an hour.

These terrible winds also drive the water before them, so that a "storm tide" rises along a shore line as a hurricane approaches. If the storm tide comes at the same time as the normal high tide, the water may rise several feet. The storm tide of a hurricane at Galveston, Texas, in 1900, drowned 6,000 persons. The water rose four feet in a few seconds.

There is one additional danger. As a hurricane moves over land, it may continue to cause heavy rains even after the winds fall below hurricane force. These rains may cause floods - killer floods. One of the floods in Connecticut in 1955 was caused by Hurricane Diane. Combined with another flood which occurred later in 1955, almost 120 people were killed.

Meteorologists of the U.S. Weather Bureau's Hurricane Warning Service carefully watch the weather reports from the Atlantic and Caribbean, and pictures of cloud systems taken by weather satellites. When they believe a new hurricane has been born, they send out planes to locate it and estimate its strength and direction.

Hour after hours, day and night, the storm's progress is checked, and warnings are issued to areas in its path.

If you should hear such warnings, take heed. Anyone who has lived through a hurricane never forgets it. Too many people have been hit by a hurricane and failed to live.

QUESTIONS REMAIN FOR SENATOR LONG

Sen. Edward V. Long has spoken in the Senate and to the Senate ethics committee about his invasion of privacy investigations and the fees he has received from a St. Louis law firm.

We would guess that the ethics committee will want to continue its preliminary research out of fairness to both the Senate and to Senator Long. We are certain that the voters of Missouri want to know more about those fees.

The senator really did not shed light on that matter. He said that none of the cases involved a conflict of interest and that the names of the clients could not be disclosed.

Perhaps this will be enough for the Senate, but we doubt whether it will be enough for the voters, who are entitled to information beyond generalities. It is true that the Senate does not require disclosure and that the ethics committee has yet to establish clear lines of conduct.

But if there is a lawyer-client relationship there also is a senator-constituent relationship. If it should prove embarrassing for those clients to have their names made public, then the voters naturally wonder why.

The burden of setting up rules to prevent this sort of doubt and confusion rests with the ethics committee and the Senate, itself. But it is up to Senator Long to give full details to the people who have elected him their representative. He hasn't done that yet - Kansas City Times

BOSS, YOU CAN FIRE ME FOR SAYING THIS

While the FCC is berating television for its cigarette commercials, we wish it would look into another aspect of tv ads aimed not at corrupting the youth but at demoralizing the adult. In tv commercials, nothing good happens to anyone past the age of discretion. Life not only doesn't begin at 40, it ends at 25.

Watch the people in these ads for a while. Teenagers invariably have great, glistening teeth. Adults have dentures and denture breath. Boys switch hair grease and girls are glad. Men don't have hair. If they do, it is full of dandruff. Boys douse themselves with shaving lotion and wait to beat off the women, like traps full of cheese. Older men are happy to find something that drains all eight sinuses.

Young people have fun. Older people have nagging headaches. Young people spend all night wolfing hamburgers at amusement parks or beach parties. Older people go to a nearby movie and have to leave because their stummick is killing them. Girls have yards of blonde hair full of body and boys nuzzle it. Wives have gray hair and their husbands won't take them dancing. Men work hard and get ahead, only to have some pimply assistant tell them they have bad breath. The teen-age wife makes a cup of coffee and turns her husband into a sex maniac. The older wife washes, irons, mops floors and puts up with birds on the sink, and her husband comes home with a miserable headache and takes it out on her. Girls are always washing their hair. Wives are always washing dishes.

Teen-agers wear sneakers and sandals. Adults wear support hose. Teen-agers rub each other with suntan oil. Adults rub each other with liniment. Teen-agers spend a lot of time in boats, sports cars and swimming pools. Adults spend their time in doctors' offices and listening to tedious insurance peddlers. Young people romp through fields and sniff flowers. Adults get hay fever and sneeze. Young people are always at the end of a glorious evening. Adults are always at the end of their rope.

Life is fun, fun, fun for the young. They can laugh even with their mouths full of hair. About the only happy time for an adult is when he has an accident and the insurance company pays off. It isn't fair. Worse, we have a feeling that it's all too true - Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal

SEE OLD-AGE TAX PAY-IN EXCEEDING BENEFIT PAY-OUT

By the time the 21-year-old who goes to work today (1967) retires at 65 in 2011, the value of the old-age taxes he will have paid during his working life (including interest lost) will exceed by more than $12,000 the benefits he will draw in retirement, says Tax Foundation's new study: Economic Aspects of the Social Security Tax. If such a man had saved a sum equal to his tax, and got 3-1/2% interest, he would accumulate more than $32,000 by retirement date. On the same day the value of the social security payments he would get (assuming normal life expectancy) would amount to about $19,000.

IN THE WRONG PLACES

In the past year or two, news dispatches have reported Soviet experiments with the much-reviled profit system as a means of spurring lagging production in various field. And it certainly seems that these are sorely needed - if the economic ambitions of the bosses in the Kremlin are to be realized to any substantial degree.

For instance, not so long ago we were told of vastly ambitious Soviet plans to increase electric power output. And fears were expressed in our own country that Russia might overtake us in this vital sphere. But now the UPI says, in a news dispatch from London, that "A growing shortage of power is reported to have started hitting European Russia's economy, which still provides the backbone of Soviet industry." And the trouble seems to be that the Soviet bureaucracy and its managers, being unconcerned with profits or public demand, have been building power plants in the wrong places. The dispatch continues: "Soviet planners have made considerable efforts to develop power in Siberia and to attract industry there. But emigration to those parts has been disappointing. Consumer demand is low and there is a shortage of manpower, with big power stations built up in the area partly idle."

The fact is that his country is far ahead of the Soviets in power output and that the lead increases. Credit that, like so many other of our economic achievements, to a system which recognizes the need for fair profits and is solidly based on the encouragement of private enterprise.

Andrew Carnegie pointed out a long time ago that no businessman needs to look outside his own factory for good investments. Many of us withdraw money needed in our own underfed enterprises and place it in tempting speculations and investments outside offering perhaps 7 or 8 per cent. Yet enterprises invest in cost-reducing devices.

As individuals and employes we are equally blind to the unexploited equities within ourselves. Books and magazines that contain valuable information can be purchased at trifling sums.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The question "Can America feed the world?" was debated recently before the International Platform Association by Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman; Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., former chairman of the food for peace committee; and Sen. Joe Clark, D-Pa., whose recent disclosures of Negro starvation in Mississippi have startled the nation.

Said Clark: "In many a country in Appalachia, children and their parents will go to bed hungry tonight. . . two thousand years ago the philosopher Seneca said, 'A hungry people listens not to reason, or cares for justice, or is bent by any prayers.' "

Said Sen. McGovern: "The hungry that lurks in the jungles of Vietnam is a greater danger than the guerrillas lurking there. . . we've accomplished more with wheat and dried milk than all the military hardware we've sent abroad."

Said Secretary Freeman: "The record will show that in the past six and one - half years this administration has made more food available to hungry people than all the previous administrations combined.

"The United States has never fought a more important war. An estimated two billion of the world's people are hungry or malnourished. Regardless of population control measures, there will be another billion mouths to feed by 1980."

CATASTROPHE INEVITABLE?

Secretary Freeman was reasonably optimistic about the chance of feeding the world in the future. Sen. McGovern was not.

"Dr. Thomas Malthus wrote a book which alarmed the world and which is still a best seller in which he said: 'Mankind's capacity to reproduce is greater than mankind's capacity to feed himself.'

"'Malthus,' continued Sen. McGovern, 'did not perceive the technical advances of agriculture which have postponed the day of reckoning. Nevertheless that day is approaching.'

It is the technical advances of agriculture which Secretary Freeman is gambling on to help feed the world. He knows that they have been amazing. In fact the advances have been so great in this country that he personally and other secretaries of agriculture before him have been embarrassed by a surplus, not a scarcity. But in the future the embarrassment may be the other way around.

Commenting on the American agricultural revolution, Silviu Brucan, former Romanian minister to the United States, once told me: "We are not much interested in American industrial machinery. The Germans, French and the Japanese have newer machinery than you. But we are interested in your farm machinery. You have produced the most revolutionary methods of farming in the world. It is your greatest contribution. But you haven't promoted it around the world."

Today some American companies are doing exactly this.

U.S. INGENUITY

The new Holland farm machinery company, developed in a small town in Pennsylvania named "New Holland," is branching out with factories in England, Australia, France and Belgium. It has adapted special combines for harvesting rice in the Philippines and southeast Asia and special balers to handle the short straw that is grown in Greece. For more humid climates, especially in the United States, New Holland has developed the "Haybine," a machine which cuts hay and presses the moisture out of it at the same time for a "crimp" so that hay does not have to lie in the sun as long as it did in the past. To some extent New Holland has outmoded the Olf Farm motto, "make hay while the sun shines."

"The world is sitting on a population time bomb with the fuse burning fast," says George C. Delp, New Holland president. "We are doing our best to prevent a global food catastrophe."

New Holland has also developed an amazing machine to pick up a crop which has fallen down in the field, chop it into small pieces and blow it into a wagon.

Another firm contributing to the agricultural revolution is the Cobey Wagon Company of Galion, Ohio, which has come a century from the old days of the lubering farm wagon to modern automatic wagons which will unload three or four tons of corn or chopped ensilage in a few minutes.

The Chore Boy Company of Cambridge City, Ind., on the other hand, has adopted a unique dairying idea from New Zealand, the Herringbone Milking Parlor, in which cows stand at an angle like the bones of a herring, to be milked. Chore boy's motto is, "Don't stoop to teats," which means the cows walk in on an elevated platform and the dairyman stands upright at a lower level to attach the automatic milkers.

The American farmer, thanks to the ingenuity of American farm machinery companies, is producing the biggest crops in history. Secretary Freeman believes the time has come for the American farm revolution to be spread abroad just as New Holland is adapting it to Philippine rice and Greek hay.

RIOT INSURANCE

Insurance men are concerned about how far to carry their interpretations of the niceties of language in policies that cover riot - damaged stores and home in cities across the nation.

After the Watts riots, insurance companies generally paid claims -- in part because Watts rioting was considered an isolated incident.

Now, however, they're seriously considering taking advantage in paying cases of "insurrection."

An Editor's Outlook

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones

NO WAY TO JUBILO

IF THERE is much more use of raw "black power" in American cities there will arise the counter- force of raw "white power." And in any brutal test of strength, white power is going to win.

Any condition of racial warfare in America will be disastrous to a minority representing about 12 per cent of the total population. It will be in less degree disastrous to the majority, too, for no racial group can possibly gain if it wins a war but loses the last vestiges of tolerance and humanity.

YET THE so-called "militant" Negro leadership, represented by Stokely Carmichael, Floyd McKissick, Leroi Jones, Cassius Clay and other odd and hysterical characters, is hell - bent for war. It has claimed "the right of black people to revolt when they deem it necessary and in their interest."

This, presumably, would also give white people the right to "revolt," i.e., take the law into their own hands, when they deem it necessary, and down that road mass murder lies. No wonder Prof. Kenneth Clark, a leading Negro psychologist, has seen in the Negro lootings a "suicidal element."

RECURRENT IN the interviews with Negroes who have stripped liquor stores, supermarkets and appliance shops was the defiant assurance that "this will wake Whitey up." It may do that, but not with the results hoped for.

The "black power" insistence that Negroes should seize political control wherever they are in a majority could result, not in ghetto neighborhoods, but in all - black cities. If such cities choked on their social problems and could not sell their municipal bonds the results would be sad. And cities with substantial white majorities might use various, even brutal means, to discourage further Negro immigration.

THE INSANITY of the "black power" philosophy has had three other manifestations:

1-- An assault on the Negro's traditional friends. White "liberals" who spearheaded and supported the original integration movement are now rejected and hooted at. Jewish organizations, which had long backed Negro aspirations, are alarmed at the anti - Semitism expressed by Negro rioters.

2--The movement to popularize bankruptcy applications among Negroes. It is advertised that for a few dollars a Negro may divest himself of any obligation to pay his debts. What isn't added is that while debt-shirking may hurt the white proprietors it will utterly ruin Negro proprietors and undermine what Negroes need most, a growing middle class. No people ever found greater acceptance or prosperity by destroying their credit ratings.

3--The edge of treason. Since the early '20s the Communist Party has been trying to alienate Negroes from the rest of America. The bitter complaints of discrimination coming from African students at Russian universities hardly show either Russians or the Red hierarchy to be sentimental about Negroes. But the creation of a violent, disloyal minority in America, culminating in the horror of civil war, is devoutly to be wished by the Communist powers. The Reds are prepared to "support" black power until the last American Negro is dead, for the result will be a weakened America, stained with blood before the world.

IT IS no longer enough to say that these self - destructive policies are not concurred in by the majority of American Negroes. The fact is that dozens of American cities now live under the threat of riot and murder.

Nor does it do to say that peace must await an outpouring of $50 billion to "eliminate slums." There is a point up to which increasing protests will generate increased efforts to satisfy them. But beyond that point there is a hardening. The majority of Americans will not enact a Negro - relief program at the point of a pistol.

THIS IS the hour when intelligent and responsible Negroes must step forward and make themselves heard, or forever stand guilty of deserting their people in a moment of crisis. Too often they have been silenced by cries of "Uncle Tom." Too often they have washed their hands of the ghettos and fled to the suburbs, themselves. The few brave and forthright souls like Negro publisher George Schuyler haven't had enough company.

Needed: A new Negro organization dedicated to the principle that the uplift of a minority can be achieved only under the protection of law, the selling point of self - improvement, and the force of votes, reason and peaceful protest. America's most able Negroes are simply going to have to tell their people that they can't shoot and loot their way in the Land of Jubilo.

Inside Labor

REUTHER'S SECRET POLLS

Members -- Mostly the Young -- Reported Ready To Strike for More Money and Early Retirement.

Detroit: -- Walter Reuther and his embattled colleagues may well be able to lend the bulk of their $65 million strike fund to this city's poor - especially those evicted from their homes by arsonists' flames. The auto union, it seems, will have little need for its huge war chest now that those flames have burned up Reuther's strategy as well as sections of the car - making metropolis.

Insiders believe it inconceivable that the United Auto Workers (UAW) will strike one or all of the Big Three corporations on Sept. 6, contract expiration date, and thus inflict disaster upon disaster. The day after Labor Day will be too soon to shut the big factories and throw among others, 100,000 Negro workers onto the still scorched streets.

Pressures from the White House on both sides will be awesome. So the rust-haired leader is expected to pull a cliff - hanger and call everybody back for the next chapter in the serial. There will be an armistice, but not for too long. Sometime in the early fall -- after the cool of the long hot summer -- Reuther will make a stand on two issues:

The auto union will fight for a "heavy wage increase" and for "a new system of earlier retirement and pensions at higher rates."

There have been a series of polls, some by the union's regional officials and one by a professional New York opinion sampler, which show that the United Auto Workers' rank and file want the physical comforts which more money can buy and the psychological comfort of guaranteed retirement security. The professional poll was taken in the past 60 days. In effect, it asked the membership which were the issues worth striking for and for how long. Even those under 30 went for the retirement demand.

The public will hear much of the famous Reuther rhetoric about guaranteed incomes and a switch to the system of permanent salaries for blue as well as white collar workers. But those speeches will be the curtain raisers to Hamlet - like soliloquies.

For the moment the auto union rank and file is not getting emotional over the guaranteed annual wage. They've practically got it. The terror is out of the job. In the old days, layoffs during tooling up for new models were the time for worry and saving of breadcrusts in the auto cities. But now the layoffs have a ball. They get Special Unemployment Benefits, unemployment insurance, and vacation pay. This gives them all but a few dollars of their regular take - home pay. And a big chunk of the summer off. They look forward to it, the young workers do. What was once a catastrophe becomes a grand holiday.

Furthermore, during the rest of the year there are similar income guarantees so that it would take only a few cents more for the companies to hike their production workers' guaranteed income. Insiders say this will be no problem.

The poll's the thing. Those reports now on Reuther's desk disclose that his people want that earlier retirement. They still seek more relief time and longer lunch periods. But basically they want to get away from the mills and assembly lines -- permanently and younger.

So, Reuther and his fantastically computer - minded technicians even are talking about some employes' retirement at 50 under special circumstances, wide retirement at 55 (without loss of benefits they would gain if they worked into their 60s), and bigger payments all along the line. There is a complex system called the "85 - points" rule won during the last go-round in '64. Frequently it permits auto workers to retire at up to 70 per cent of their previously earned annual income. Nor Reuther wants that heavily increased.

Nor is he ignoring any past retirees. He wants them included in any new increased pension systems -- regardless of when they retired from the auto companies hire.

So there are the fronts on which Reuther and company will fight. Those polls showed a "surprising number" of workers demanding earlier retirement and so Reuther will head the surveys. The issues will be sharpened after the conferees get out of what UAW Ford Council Director Ken Bannon calls the "nitty - gritty" stage of negotiations, during which each side probes the other's weaknesses.

They'll all be laboring over Labor Day weekend. The issues are clear -- money and a secure middle - age type of retirement for the younger multitudes to dream about.

Only Reuther's timetable still is in doubt.

Favorite Interview With Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower

By Barbara Walters
For Cynthia Lowry

Editor's Note: Next month Barbara Walters will have been appearing on NBC's Today show for three years, longer than any other woman in the show's 15-year history. Here she tells how she feels about the job and answers the two questions she's asked most: When does she get up, and what was her favorite interview? --

NEW YORK AP - When I was first promoted from a behind-the-camera writer on the show to an in - front- of - the - camera broadcaster, I used to say that I loved the job so much that I would do it for nothing.

I still feel that way except that my business manager has advised me that it is foolhardy, to say that publicly, especially as my contract is up for renegotiation.

But I cannot underestimate the pleasures of my job, of working daily with Hugh Downs, whom I could not possibly like or respect more, of travelling all over the world, of meeting the most creative and influential people of our time.

I arise every weekday at 4:40 a.m. I have not gotten used to the hours, but I have never overslept. I dress in the dark in clothes I have laid out the night before so as not to awaken my husband. I am at the studio by 5:30 to have my hair set, my face made up and to rehearse commercials. The rest of the program is unrehearsed.

I'm often asked which interview I enjoyed most.

It is very hard to pick one from the list of prominent people who have appeared on "Today," but I think Mamie Eisenhower might be pretty close to the top of my list. Perhaps because I could not remember anyone having interviewed her before, and I had heard that she was shy of reporters.

Instead, interviewing General Eisenhower and her at Gettysburg on their 50th wedding anniversary, I found her to be not only warm and witty but above all considerate.

It was a tortuously hot summer day and I was the only female reporter present. Mrs. Eisenhower spotted me immediately and invited me inside the cool house for iced tea and a long chat.

Nor did she neglect the male reporters. Out to them, talking with the general, went ice cold soft drinks.

I have often felt that if there had been a female television reporter in Washington during President Eisenhower's terms of office, we would all have known Mamie Eisenhower much better.

Tomatoes are low in calories, rich in Vitamin C and a good source of Vitamin A. One medium sized tomato, raw, provides almost half of the Vitamin C for the day plus about one-third of the Vitamin A. Field ripened tomatoes are higher in Vitamin C than fall and winter greenhouse tomatoes. Tomatoes retain a good share of their vitamins when canned or cooked though fresh tomatoes are higher in nutritive value.

Fresh tomatoes with a slightly greenish cast will ripen in a day or two at room temperature. Ripe tomatoes should be kept in the refrigerator and used soon. Green tomatoes will ripen satisfactorily if kept in a dry place, light or dark, at a temperature of from 55 degrees to 70 degrees F.

To help preserve the original flavor, color and vitamin content, keep canned tomatoes in a cool place until you open the cans. You can keep the tomatoes covered in the open tin or in another container in the refrigerator for several days.

During peak canning periods for tomato items, wholesalers and retail stores must clear space for incoming stock. You can take advantage of such a sale to restock your shelves. Other special sales may be due to a large carry over stock. No matter what the special price you are getting the same quality of the same brand as you do at regular prices.

Tomatoes Rich in Vitamins

By Mrs. Mattie E. Aslin
Extension Home Economist

KENNETT -- Tomatoes like peaches and other fruits are fine textured and the meat of the vegetable is rich in vitamins and minterals. Since tomatoes are high in water content, a boiling water bath (212 degrees F.) for processing tomatoes will result in a firm product. Presurring tomatoes or other fruits is not recommended as the high temperature deteriorates their texture. Forty-five minutes time for pints and 55 minutes for quart jars in the water-bath is sufficient. Take the jars out of the water when the time is up as the product will still cook if left in the hot water.

Using only the perfect ripe tomatoes will help insure a well kept jar. To loosen skins, dip into boiling water for about 1/2 minute; then dip quickly into cold water, cut out stem ends and peel tomatoes.

Pack tomatoes to 1/2 inch of top of jar pressing gently to fill spaces. Add no water if liquid is needed, use tomato juice if you do plan to pack.

We have increased our per person consumption of tomato juice and other canned tomato products. We now eat about the same amount of canned tomatoes per person as 30 years ago, but somewhat more canned tomato juice than formerly. We eat on the average about twice as many tomatoes fresh as we eat canned. In the consumption of canned tomato products, tomato juice and vegetable juices which contain 70 per cent or more tomato rank first. When we include canned tomatoes, our yearly consumption per person has been greater than that of any other canned vegetable.

Nationalism Program for Baptist WMS

The night Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church met at the church Thursday for their general missionary study. There were 12 members and 3 guests, Nancy Bryant, Diane Gosnell, one of the Girls Auxiliary leaders, and Mrs. Lenzie Beck, Women's Missionary Union president, present.

The prayer calendar was read and the call to prayer given by Mrs. Carl Elam.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

President Ruth Steward asked for a report from each circle. Mrs. Salder, chairman of circle five reported that they had met with Mrs. Linn Smith and that there were five present. Mrs. Harold Bean gave the program. Miss Neva Mae Taylor from circle six reported that they had met at Mrs. John Brannock's home with 17 members and one visitor present.

The president asked for opinions from those present about forming a third circle. Mrs. Sadler reported they had 14 enrolled in circle five and Miss Dessie Hydrick reported that circle six had 19 enrolled. The president asked Mrs. Beck if she had any suggestions about forming a third circle.

Mrs. Beck said if one volunteer from each circle would act as chairman and co-chairman, a third circle would be formed. President Steward asked that the society consider the suggestion. It will be discussed later.

President Steward reported the discussion of the leadership course in an executive committee meeting, and asked that all who worked come to the church at 5:30.

The season of prayer, Sept. 13-15, was mentioned. Mrs. Beck said the Rev. James Hackney wanted the group to cooperate as a church this year and have a good attendance on Wednesday night. He has engaged a speaker from the state office who will lead this season of prayer. Plans for the next two days will be made.

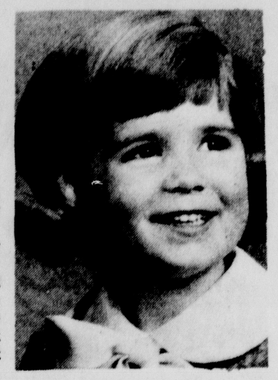

The president announced that a request had been made by the welfare office for help to obtain a wheel chair for an aged man and that the day circles had given $6. The circle was asked to give $4.

Program leaders for next month will be Mrs. Cathleen Gipson.

The president introduced Mrs. Don Beggs, program leader. The song "Am I a Soldier of the Cross" was led by Mrs. Beggs with Miss Taylor at the piano. Mrs. Beggs gave a program on nationalism. The meeting was closed with a prayer by Mrs. Lenzie Beck.

Jane Fonda in Bed After Bird Scene

ROME, (AP) — After a week of working nearly nude in a high wind with 2,000 birds actress Jane Fonda wound up in bed today running a temperature.

Doctors didn't know whether it was a virus she might have caught from the birds. They prescribed medicine and ordered her to rest.

Her encounter with the birds was for a scene in the picture "Barbarella" she is doing in Rome under the direction of her husband, Roger Vadim.

The scene calls for a swarm of wrens in a huge cage to rip her clothes off with their bills.

Catholic Priest, Former Convent Superior Marry

MIDLAND, Mich. AP -- A Roman Catholic priest and the former superior of a Catholic convent have wed in an Episcopal church.

The Rev. Frank E. Dewitt, 36, until recently assistant pastor at St. Brigid's church in Midland, exchanged vows Friday night with Marilyn Corby, 34-year-old former superior of nearby St. Brigid's convent.

The simply ceremony was performed in St. John's Episcopal Church by the Rev. William O. Swan, assistant pastor. "It was just like any other marriage ceremony." said the Rev. Mr. Swan.

There was no comment from Catholic officials.

He said the newlyweds could not get permission to marry within their own communion.

Catholic canon law forbids the clergy to marry except in very unusual circumstances.

The Rev. Mr. Swan said he held the usual permarriage conferences with the couple with the only different that these included "a discussion about the unusual marriage."

Shortly before the ceremony, attended only by the families of Dewitt and his wife, the couple issued a statement.

"The exercise of the right to marry is within the realm of personal choice, rather than institutional choice," they said.

"We hold the right for a priest to marry in accordance with Paul."

In his first letter to the Corinthians, St. Paul wrote, "Do we not have the right to be accompanied by a wife as the other apostles and brothers of the Lord and Cephas?"

"Furthermore," wrote the couple, "a priest may normally pursue the right to marriage in accordance with the statement of Pope John XXIII - 'He who has right has also the duty demanding those marks of his dignity.' "

The couple said they interpret the late Pope's comment to mean "that it is unjust that the love between a man and a woman leading to the stable union of marriage should be a cause for a priest being unable to exercise his ministry."

The Rev. Mr. Swan said both Dewitt and his wife intend to remain Catholics.

Both Dewitt and his wife had resigned their positions at St. Brigid's and were planning to take up teaching positions in another town, the Rev. Mr. Swan said.

"I'm not a liberty to say which town, or even which state," he said.

FREEDOM and RESPONSIBILITY

Our nation has lost impetus and conviction because it has confused the free with the free and easy. If freedom means ease alone, if it means shirking discipline, we may keep for a time the forms of free society, but its spirit will be gone. The foundation for freedom is responsibility. And true responsibility is sensing and trying to fulfill our responsibility to life and God. Worship gives us the resources for meeting this responsibility. If you are not worshipping elsewhere, we would invite you to worship with us this Sunday at Trinity Baptist Church.

Denbow Named Most Valuable
Ruth Stars Take Invitational

POPLAR BLUFF - It took Sikeston's Babe Ruth All-Stars two games in one night to win the annual Poplar Bluff Babe Ruth invitational baseball tournament and defend its title.

The Stars dumped Fredericktown 13-0 and clubbed Dexter 13-3.

The Sikeston group used the 10-run rule that puts a team in the winners circle after four and one half innings if it is leading by 10 or more runs.

Sikeston went only four innings in the first game. Dan Cartwright faced only 12 batsmen in four innings and gave up a bunt single to the 11 he faced.

Sikeston used 12 hits in the first game, including four doubles and a triple to storm past Fredericktown.

Dye, Sorrells, Ogles and Senciboy each collected a pair of hits to lead the offensive attack.

Sikeston batsmen banged out 14 safeties in the championship contest against Dexter. The Stars were led by Jim Denbow's three for four performance at the plate and Eddie Throop's six-hit pitching.

Throop missed a major league homer in the fourth, blasting a 380-foot drive that curved foul. He flied to the left fielder on his next pitch.

Jim Denbow, who batted over 600 in the tournament, was named the most valuable player and teammates Dan Cartwright, David Dollar and Throop received honorable mention.

The Stars, who lost out in the early part of the campaign to Cape Girardeau for the district Babe Ruth title have been playing their best ball since.

Sikeston will travel to Paragould, Ark., to participate in an invitational tournament. It meets Piggott at 4 p.m. Monday.

Rudy Manley was tagged for five hits as the Arkansans, Roy Matthews checked the Foresters to three hits, including the game's only extra base blast, a triple off Richard Montgomery's bat to lead off the first. Montgomery scored on Mike Garner's sacrifice in the first for the only Forester run.

SEATTLE AP - Charles O. Finley was expected in Seattle today to discuss with city, county and state officials the possibility of moving the Kansas City A's to that city.

The Seattle Times reported this Friday, saying Finley apparently wants to meet quietly with the officials concerning a move.

Finley told directors of both major leagues Thursday in Chicago that he has hired a management consultant firm to help determine the future of the American League club's franchise. Oakland and Seattle were mentioned as possible locations if the A's leave Kansas City.

Air Marshal Dunlap Plans Retirement; MacBrien to Be NORAD Deputy Chief

COLORADO SPRINGS — (NNS) — Air Marshal C. R. (Larry) Dunlap, the North American Air Defense Command's deputy commander in chief for the past three years, will retire from the Royal Canadian Air Force Aug. 25.

He will be succeeded in the post at NORAD headquarters here by Air Marshal William Ross MacBrien, 53, of Ottawa, who has been assistant chief of staff at Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers Europe, since October 1962.

The 59-year-old Air Marshal Dunlap, whose rank is equivalent to that of a U.S. three-star general, has 39 years' military service.

Air Marshal Dunlap

Air Marshal MacBrien

During that career he played a major role in the planning that led to the establishment of NORAD nearly a decade ago. He also saw air defense enter a new dimension when the NORAD Combat Operations Center moved underground and beneath the granite hardness of Cheyenne Mountain here.

The fruition of that 10-year effort to give the nerve center of the continent-wide air defense system a greater chance at surviving an enemy blow, came during his service as deputy commander in chief of NORAD.

Taking the post in August of 1964, Air Marshal Dunlap succeeded retiring Air Marshal C. R. Slemon to become the second man to serve as the NORAD deputy commander in chief.

In that position he shares with the commander in chief, U.S. Air Force Gen. Raymond J. Reeves, the responsibility for operational control of all air defense forces assigned to the international command to carry out its mission of air defense of Canada and the U.S.

Canada's Minister of National Defence, The Honorable Paul T. Hellyer, cited the officer's career as being "distinctive for its close interplay with the Navy and Army in Canada, and with members of the military forces of the various countries with which Canada is associated in the NATO and NORAD alliances."

The defense minister expressed his personal appreciation "and that of the government for Air Marshal Dunlap's devoted and efficient service."

He noted, "For Air Marshal Dunlap, this is the culmination of a long and distinguished career in the Canadian Forces, one which included an unusual variety of operational and staff appointments."

Born at Sydney Mines, Nova Scotia, Air Marshal Dunlap's early service included several years of flying in some of the remote areas in Canada on aerial photography and mapping operations.

For outstanding wartime service in command of bomber wings he was made a commander of the Order of the British Empire and awarded the U.S. Silver Star and the French Croix de Guerre.

After the war he served in a series of senior staff and command appointments, including deputy chief of staff for Operations at SHAPE, an assignment which he held before being appointed Chief of the Air Staff at Royal Canadian Air Force Headquarters in Ottawa in September 1962.

Some years ago Air Marshal Dunlap, during his tour of duty as Vice-Chief of the Air Staff, was in charge of the Canadian section of a study group established to examine the necessity for an integrated system for the protection of Canada and the United States against air attack.

This group, made up of officers of the Canadian Army, Navy and Air Force, as well as members of the Defence Research Board and the Department of External Affairs, submitted recommendations to the Chiefs of Staff Committee and, through them, to the Canadian Government, strongly supporting the need for air defense integration.

This led to the Canada-United States agreement covering the organization known as NORAD.

Mr. Hellyer said Air Marshal MacBrien is well qualified for his new appointment at NORAD, and takes to the post more than 31 years' service with the RCAF.

During World War II he commanded a fighter wing in England and following the invasion of "Fortress Europe," commanded the Canadian Fighter Sector.

Among the senior appointments he has held since the war are chief of Operations at RCAF headquarters and air officer commanding, RCAF Air Defence Command. In October 1962 he became assistant to the chief of staff at SHAPE, and since July 1966 has also been deputy chief of staff for Logistics and Administration at the same headquarters.

IT'S UP TO YOU

A Few Interesting Facts

HERE are some little known facts about the Union of South Africa:

Dr. Kershner

. . . In 1965 the United States exported to South Africa $138 million worth of goods, and imported only $225 million worth from that country, showing a favorable trade balance to our country of $213 million.

. . . With only six percent of Africa's population, the Union of South Africa turned out about 40 percent of the industrial production of the continent.

. . . South Africa produced 80 percent of Africa's steel, 90 percent of its gold, and 60 percent of its electricity.

. . . During the last five years the wages of native South Africans rose nearly 40 percent. Their skills are improving, their standards of living rising, their fields of employment and occupation widening.

. . . Over 12,000 black people own their own businesses, some bank as much as $3,000 a day. Three are reputed to be millionaires.

. . . No youth who can pass the matriculation examination need miss a university education if he wants it — regardless of his race or color.

. . . There are more than 2,800 native South Africans who are university graduates.

. . . In the Union of South Africa, 83 percent of the black children are in school. This is much higher than in any other African country.

. . . Virtually every black child is within walking distance of a primary school . . . . Nowhere in independent Africa do people, regardless of race or color, have as high a standard of living, education and health services, as in South Africa . . . . About one million foreign black Africans work in South Africa. With great difficulty other millions are prevented from crossing the borders in search of the benefits to be found from living and working in South Africa. We Americans should keep in mind these facts about the Union of South Africa as we evaluate our nation's policies toward that country.

Expo 67 Plans to Lose Money

By ROGER DOUGHTY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

MONTREAL—(NEA)—Losing $138 million may not be the nicest way to spend the summer, but Pierre Dupuy, commissioner-general of Canada's Expo 67, plans to do just that. He also plans to enjoy every minute of the experience.

Mr. Dupuy, former ambassador to France, has been plotting Expo's course since September of 1963 when he took on his present post of top man for the Canadian Corporation, whose job it is to run the huge exhibition.

Ambassador Dupuy, who estimates he traveled two million miles and visited 125 countries during his three years of planning what Expo should and should not be, figures the big show will close Oct. 27 with a deficit of at least $138 million. In 1964, the original prediction for the deficit was a modest $44 million, but things just kept getting bigger and better as the years rolled along.

Unlike New York's late and little-lamented World's Fair, Expo is designed to win friends and influence people by losing money. Before the New York World's Fair opened in 1964, headman Robert Moses predicted that the big show would produce a surplus of $53 million. But, for reasons still being debated, the fair was a flop to the tune of a $44-million loss.

OFFICIAL HOSTESSES at the American Pavilion at Expo 67 are easy on the eyes in outfits praised for "artlessness and purity of design." There's plenty to see at Expo, including pretty girls.

The Canadians plan to spend about $380 million on Expo, with income estimated at $242 million. However, our neighbors to the north consider the deficit to be a short-term loss that will be offset by long-term gains. That kind of thinking may not put any money in the bank, but it also won't lead to any unexpected shocks, such as the type New York received at the close of the Flushing Meadows fiasco.

Since 1967 marks the 100th anniversary of Canada's confederation, the host country is going all out to make Expo a smashing success. Plans have been in the works for seven years, so the results should be impressive.

In 1960 Canada applied to the Bureau of International Exhibitions, the agency that sets down rules covering expositions, and applied for the 1967 celebration. The Soviet Union also applied and much to the sorrow of the Canadians, the Russians got the nod. However, the Soviets changed their minds and decided they didn't want to host the exhibition after all, and Canada was back in business.

As big as it is, Expo also plans to be the quietest exhibition in history. Public safety officers, equipped with sound meters, will be on the job all during the run of the exhibition. They plan to check on everything from mechanical equipment down to exhaust fans to make sure the noise level is kept down. There'll be no public address systems on the site, which should be a big help right there.

There's a special traffic control system designed to cut congestion in the Expo area.

There's even a closed circuit television system to be used to reunite lost children with their parents (so don't try to dump any kids while you're there) and caterers who can whip up buffalo steaks at a moment's notice.

All in all, representatives from Austria to Upper Volta will be on hand for what could turn out to be the biggest show in North America since the last glacier.

It should be a very cool affair.

Many U.N. Embassies Have Bought Old New York Homes of the Wealthy

By CHARLES STORER
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Some of the wealthiest families in American business and finance are among the former owners of stately old New York homes now used by foreign governments for their missions to the United Nations.

The handsome town houses, considered by many the choicest residential real estate in Manhattan, are located on and just off Fifth Avenue in a fashionable East Side district.

Many have been singled out by the city for preservation as historic landmarks. They are regarded as distinguished examples of styles of architecture and construction no longer employed in the city.

By a strange ideological twist, the town houses owned by Communist Romania and Yugoslavia for their U.N. delegations are linked by close family ties to Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, reputed to have been the richest man in America when he died in 1877.

These two onetime homes appear to be the most highly regarded among the 16 U.N. missions that have been chosen by the city for designation as landmarks.

The others among the 16 are the missions of Austria, Cuba, France, Greece, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Israel, Mali, Pakistan, the Philippines, Poland, Senegal and Tunisia.

The Romanian mission, a three-story stone building in what is said to be French 18th Century revival style, was built in 1929 for Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, the divorced wife of William K. Vanderbilt Jr., a great-grandson of the commodore.

The Vanderbilt millions came primarily from the New York Central Railroad but also from shipping and ferries in New York Harbor.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, born Virginia Fair, was the daughter of U.S. Sen. James Graham Fair of Nevada, who made a fortune in the Comstock Lode, a rich Nevada gold and silver strike of the mid 1800s.

The New York Landmarks Preservation Commission said the mission "is a prime example of the last phase of classical house building in the palatial manner."

The commission added that it "would be entirely at home amongst those small retreats which were built by courtiers throughout the 18th Century at Versailles."

The original cost of the house is not known, but a Romanian source said his government paid $300,000 for it 12 years ago.

The Romanians bought the house from the Chrysler family. After Mrs. Vanderbilt, it had been owned by Mrs. Byron C. Foy, daughter of Walter Chrysler, founder of the Chrysler Corp., the auto manufacturers.

Finding themselves cramped for space several years ago, the Romanians placed the building on the market and reportedly received an offer in excess of $600,000.

The offer was rejected.

Romanian officials also have considered adding another story to the building, but this plan is being held up because of fears it would detract from the value of the building in the event of an eventual decision to sell.

Another factor is the attitude of the city. The designation of a building as a landmark means that it may not be demolished or modified on the exterior.

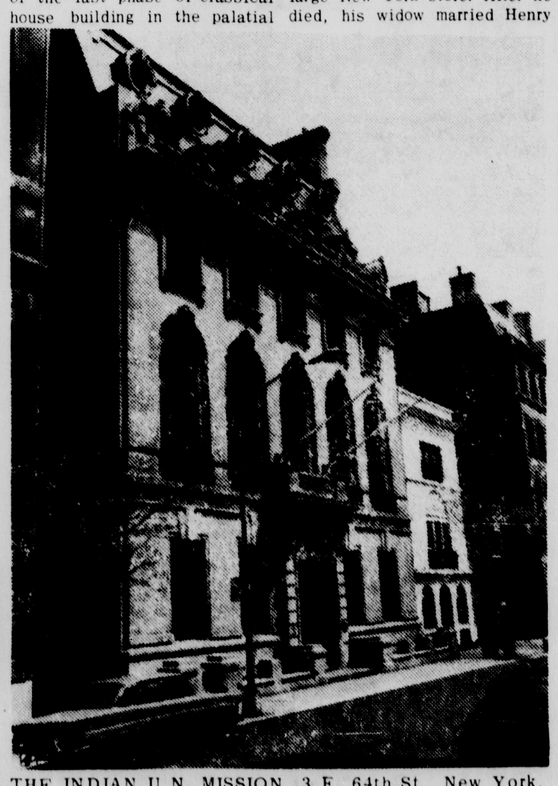

Because of their diplomatic status, this provision may not apply to U.N. missions, which also are exempt from city real estate taxes, but the Romanians say they have no desire to get into a quarrel with the city or disturb friendly relations with their neighbors.

The Yugoslav mission, on Fifth Avenue, was built in 1903 for R. Livingston Beekman, a former governor of Rhode Island. It later was owned by Mrs. Emily Vanderbilt Sloane, a granddaughter of Commodore Vanderbilt.

Mrs. Sloane's husband, William D. Sloane, was a founder of a large New York store. After he died, his widow married Henry White, who served as U.S. ambassador in France and Italy.

THE YUGOSLAV U.N. MISSION has been described by the New York City Landmarks Preservation Commission as "the finest extant 'small' house on Fifth Avenue. It is at 854 Fifth Ave., was once owned by Mrs. Emily Vanderbilt Sloane, granddaughter of Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt.

THE INDIAN U.N. MISSION, 3 E. 64th St., New York, was built in 1900 for Marshall Orme Wilson whose wife was the great-granddaughter of John Jacob Astor and daughter of socialite Mrs. William Astor.

The city landmarks commission describes the Yugoslav mission as "the finest extant 'small' house on the avenue." It is a narrow building of five stories and with a facade of stone. Its style is described as "French eclectic."

It was ignored in the recent series of bomb explosions blamed on exiled Yugoslav terrorists, which damaged the Yugoslav consulate in New York, the embassy in Washington and other Yugoslav government buildings elsewhere in the United States and Canada.

"The style is palatial," the landmarks commission said, and the house displays "a new dignity, restraint and purity of manner, if not of style, which sets it apart as not only 'avant-garde' but also as a definite high-water mark in the history of the town facade."

Warren & Wetmore, the architectural firm that designed the Yugoslav mission, also drew the plans for the Indian mission. A larger building, it was erected in 1900 for Marshall Orme Wilson, whose father, Richard T. Wilson, a reference work says, made a fortune selling cotton blankets at woolen prices to the Confederate government during the Civil War.

The younger Wilson's wife was Caroline Schermerhorn Astor, the great-granddaughter of John Jacob Astor, whose many millions came from furs and real estate. Her mother was Mrs. William Astor, the most prominent socialite of her era.

Mrs. Wilson, widowed and alone, died in the early 1940s and bequeathed the house and all its rich furnishings to a servant.

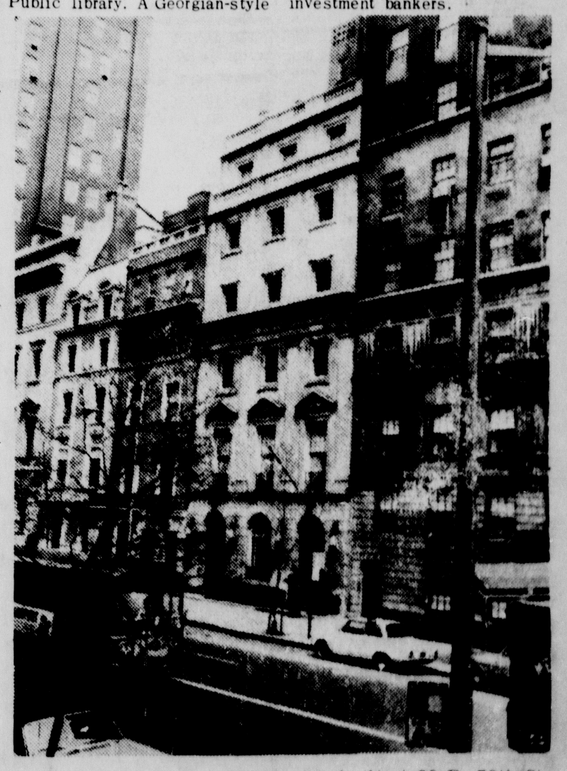

The Indian government bought it from the servant in 1948.

The oldest former home now used as a U.N. mission is that of the delegation of Senegal. This five-story brick building was put up in 1877, but landmark commission records do not disclose the original owner. The commission says the house has "a handsome door" and is "otherwise sophisticated in a plain kind of way."

The Greek mission was built in 1907 for George L. Rives, a prominent New York lawyer who was a trustee of the New York Public library. A Georgian-style home, it "shows itself in every particular as the work of (an architectural) firm of the first rank," the commission says.

The Polish mission was originally owned by Charles Scribner of the New York publishing house that bears his name. It was built for him in 1909 at a cost estimated at $85,000.

Next door is the mission of the Philippines delegation, which also is Poland's neighbor in the alphabetical list of U.N. members. It was built in 1916 for Harris Fahnestock, a member of a wealthy family of New York investment bankers.

THE GREEK U.N. MISSION was built at 69 E. 79th St. in 1907 for George L. Rives, a prominent New York laywer. It is in Georgian style.

BURTON BROWN, Charleston, examines aerial photographs under a stereoscope.

Stereoscope Aids Soil Scientist

Three dimentional viewing of topography is obtained by using two similar photographs in a stereoscope. These photographs are of the same area, but were taken in different positions.

The stereoscope is of more benefit to the Soil Conservation Service when used on photographs taken in the hills but it also can be used to good advantage in the delta area.

Topography of a particular area can be studied before a field investigation. This benefits the soil scientist since many soils are related to topographic positions.

Besides showing topography, it also aids in joining completed soil maps, determing slope, defining other landscape features leevees, borrow pits, and drainage ditches - and outlining drainage areas for determining runoff, design of farm ponds and lakes.

FARM LABOR BULLETIN

STATE SUMMARY

Southeast Missouri reports excessive rainfall, while average rainfall was general through most of the remaining areas.

71 unfilled year - round and 19 seasonal openings on hand as of July 31. 32 year-round and 2,956 seasonal placements were made last week with milo rogueing, corn detasseling, haying, peach picking and cotton chopping demanding most of the seasonal labor. VFPR's contributed 287 additional placements.

850 workers were referred within the state from one local office area to another to help alleviate local seasonal labor shortages, this was primarily milo rogueing and hybrid corn detasseling. 100 workers were referred for in-plant work, tomato and cherry picking in the Great Lake States.

West Plains reports single male workers available for work in the northern states.

SOUTHEAST

Sikeston: 202 South Kingshighway - Telephone: Granite 1-2731.

The Sikeston area has very little local work to offer. The bulk of workers available for out-of-area work have gone or are committed. Out-of-area in-plant orders are on file and some shortage of workers to fill these is expected.

Farm Labor Information Station & Rest Camp, Route No. 2, Sikeston.

The Camp served 58 migrants last week with 46 en route to Michigan and 12 going to Texas.

Kennett: 405 St. Francis Street - Telephone: Tuxedo 8-3184.

The Dunklin county peach harvest started this week with 18 growers harvesting one of the best peach crops in several years. The price and demand is holding real good. Students in the local areas make up a good part of the labor. The watermelon harvest has started and should really get going next week. Several applicants that were referred to Mobility have been placed on jobs in Northern Missouri.

Cape Girardeau: 231 North Main Street - Telephone: Edgewater 5-6666.

Due to inclement weather conditions, demand for seasonal workers has been very light for the past seven days. Short 10 cannery workers for in-plant work located in State of Illinois. All workers interested should contact this office immediately.

Poplar Bluff: 211 Pine Street - Telephone: 785-9606.

Local showers have been falling but more rain is needed. All crops are in fair condition. No farm work going on in this area. No farm families for referral to other areas at present time.

West Plains: 111 Walnut Street - Telephone: 256-3158.

Local farm orders slow. Have referred several more applicants to Mobility for interview travel to job sites in North Missouri and Iowa. Have several singles interested in cannery work in northern states.

Caruthersville: 300 Ward Street - Telephone: Edison 3-2416.

Heavy rains, especially in and around the Caruthersville and Hayti areas, completely stopped farm activities during the week. Light to moderate rainfall over the other areas of the county were very beneficial to crops and only delayed activities for a day or two. Cotton crops are showing much improvement but are still below normal for this time of year. Soybean crops are good over most of the area. Ginning operations are not expected to start before October, which will be from four to five weeks later than usual.

CLASS GOES TO THE LAKE

The Young People's class of the Baptist church went to Wappapello Lake on a picnic Saturday. FERTILIZER BOOSTED HAY YIELD of meadow in Montgomery County. Merle Vaughan, county extension director, says bales on left, stacked three high, represent area receiving 60-40-40 fertilizer treatment per acre. The yield was one and one half times greater than from unfertilized area, represented by two - bale stack in center. At right, the lone bale indicates yield from area receiving 220 pounds of a soil conditioner per acre. Per acre yield, harvested June 23, was about 5,450 pounds from fertilized land, 3,860 pounds from untreated acreage, and 1,900 pounds from area treated with soil conditioner.

No Pat Answers to Improving Pastures

BENTON -- Gov. Warren E. Hearnes has designated August as pasture improvement month.

No doubt you will see newspaper "ads" by machinery, fertilizer, seed dealers, and lending agencies promoting pasture improvement. Why are these people willing to spend their hard-earned money promoting pasture improvement?

I think the answer is quite obvious. Naturally, they expect to get some milage out of their ads toward the promotion of products they have to sell. However, their primary purpose is the promotion of pasture improvement. They are aware of the fact that if their customers make more money so will they.

The future of a business firm supplying products to agriculture is much brighter if the crop and livestock production of that region is on a sound economic basis.

Historically, cash crops such as cotton, corn, soybeans, and wheat have received much more attention than pasture and hay crops in the Delta area of Missouri. However, this by no way means that forages are not important to the economy of the area. Nor does it mean that forage crops are not profitable. It is the contention of this writer that they will become even more important to the area in the future, both from the standpoint of the dollars of sales generated and the profit of individual producers.

Labor costs have increased and will continue to increase and the supply of good labor is not overly abundant. During the past two years many farmers have employed their farm labor on a full-time, year-around basis. No doubt this trend will continue. How is this related to pasture improvement? Quite simply! It is extremely costly to pay $1 to $1.50 per hour for labor for a year and only have the labor productively employed six to eight months out of the year.

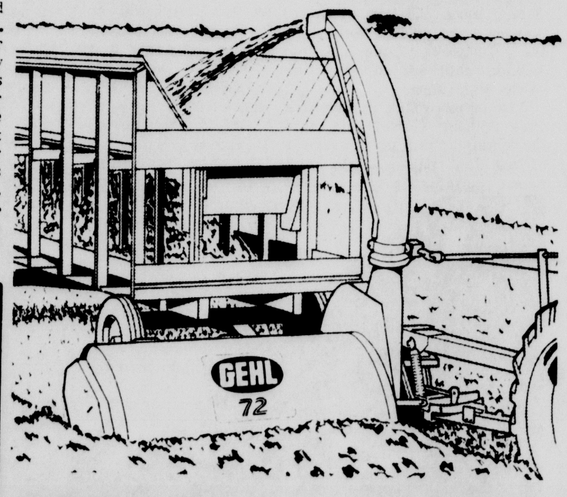

The addition or expansion of livestock enterprises which have maximum labor requirements during the slack periods of the years is one way of spreading out these labor costs.

However, pasture and hay or, for that matter, any other crop will not make interest or principal payments on land costing from $300 to $600 per acre if they are yielding only one half their capacity.

There is no pat answer or set of rules to follow which carries a guarantee of success attached on pasture improvement. For some producers complete pasture renovation may be the most economical choice; while others may need to revamp their liming program and increase their applications of nitrogen, phosphate, and potash. There may be others who need to do a better job of pasture management. For example, overgrazing is one of the quickest ways (other than a plow) of destroying a good pasture particularly during a drought.

What should you do to improve your pasture or hay crops? This is a decision that only you can make because you pay the bills or suffer the consequences. However, there is an abundant supply of information on pasture and hay crops at your University Extension Center available upon request which may help you to make a better decision.

I-57 Work Scheduled

CHARLESTON -- An interchange of letters between Illinois Division of Highways and the Missouri State Highway Department, and then between Mo. SHD and the office of Governor Warren E. Hearnes has established a rough schedule of work on I-57 in this area.

The Illinois Division of Highways says: "The portion from Marion to east of Ullin is completed and open. From east of Ullin to east of Mounds the highway is under construction, and it is anticipated that it will be completed in the fall of 1968.

"From east of Mounds to he river and the river bridge, completion is anticipated for late 1970."

On this side of the Mississippi, G. M. Threlkeld, public information director for the Missouri State Highway Department advises: "The bride itself . . . is a joint project with Illinois, and we plan to take bids for the substructure of the bridge during the 1968 fiscal year. Construction for the balance of the bride is scheduled for the 1969 fiscal year.

"Construction for the portion of about 9.3 miles from U.S. Route 60 to the Mississipi River is scheduled for the 1970 fiscal year."

Since the highway department's fiscal year beings on July 1, the start of construction of the short section of I-57 in Missouri, from a point about two miles east of Charleston to the River cannot be expected until mid-1969-roughly two years from now.

Acquisition of right of way for the 9.3 mile stretch of I-57 was schedule for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1967 and that work should be in progress now.

Senators Meet With State 4-H Members

WASHINGTON -- Missouri Senators Stuart Symington and Edward H. Long met with the Missouri delegation to the National 4-H Citizenship Short Course here. There are 35 4-H club members from Southeast Missouri attending the short course.

"The more young people take an interest in government, the better it is for our country," Senator Symington told the group. In answer to a question from the 4-H'ers Senator Symington also discussed the Vietnamese war. "We can either take action to move forward or get out of Vietnam," he said.

Senator Long urged the 4-H'ers to continue their active interest in citizenship.

"The government belongs to you people," he said. "The trouble is, some government agency people get to thinking the government belongs to them," Senator Long added.

Carolyn Lang, and Fred Schwartz, gave reports to the senators on the 4-H Citizenship Short Course and on 4-H club work. Earlier in the day the group went on a special tour of the work. Earlier in the day the group went on a special tour of the White House. The tour was arranged by Senator Symington. The group also toured the supreme court building and the Library of Congress.

A team of four Missourians has been selected to compete in a citizenship quiz contest. They are Terry Conrad, Sedgewickville, Pam Wampler, Farmington, John Plummer, Charleston, and Diana Johnson, Shook. They will compete with teams from five other states attending the 4-H citizenship short course.

Counties represented at the citizenship short course are Cape Girardeau, Perry, St. Francois, Ste. Genevieve, Bollinger, Iron, Dunklin, pemiscott, Mississippi, Wayne, Washington, Butler, Stoddard, and Scott.

This conference is sponsored by the National 4-H Club Foundation and in cooperation with the University of Missouri extension division.

A Plane Crash . . . A Heroine's Medal

Sp5 Carrol Y. Picard

FORT SHAFTER, Hawaii (ANF)—A Women's Army Corps specialist has received the Soldier's Medal, a U.S. Army noncombat heroism award, for her rescue work following an airplane crash.

Sp5 Carrol Y. Picard of Livonia, La., aided an injured passenger and helped reduce the chance of fire after the Army aircraft in which she was riding crashed Dec. 18, 1964, during a flight from Fort Huachuca, Ariz., to Fort Bliss, Texas.

She and another passenger were injured when the plane crashed. The Soldier's Medal citation described Specialist Picard's actions:

"Without regard to her personal safety and injuries, she minimized the fire hazard in the fume-filled cabin by disabling the aircraft electrical system and, unassisted, extracted the unconscious passenger from the wreckage."

She then helped the semi-conscious passenger walk five miles through freezing weather to obtain medical aid. Specialist Picard has been a draftsman at Headquarters, U.S. Army, Pacific, since September 1966.

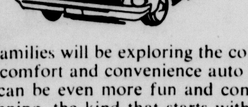

SWIMSUIT CHOICES — Summer's young fashionables can choose a bikini or a one-piece suit and still be in the swim of fashion, so long as the styling's feminine. Both looks are interpreted here in sheer dotted cotton, with color-on-white dots giving a frosted look. The shirt-styled cover-up teams with either suit. By Catalina.

QUICK TIPS for Smooth Trips

By Paula Johnson
Woman's Representative
American Oil Company

This summer most families will be exploring the country by car, largely because of the comfort and convenience auto travel offers. Discovering America can be even more fun and convenient with thorough advance planning, the kind that starts with a trip plan. You can order good plans—complete with marked maps; hotel, motel, and highway information, and expense-record forms—from major oil companies or through membership in organizations like the American Oil Motor Club.

Request that your maps show the scenic route if you really want to explore. Take a direct route back if you must, or an alternate scenic route if you have the time. Out-of-the-way places can add unprecedented pleasure and adventure to a trip. Your wandering needn't be haphazard, however. The second part of good planning is knowing where you can get accurate local information—at As You Travel service stations, for example, or the special tourist-information booths set up in many cities during the travel season. (The emergency information local sources have—where to find a good doctor, lawyer, or veterinarian, for instance—can be mighty helpful, too, if you suddenly need it.)

So you don't miss the unplanned fun, determine the main things you want to see and do and exactly how long it takes to get from one to another. Then add a few days of uncommitted time to your vacation to enjoy some memorable side-pleasures.

* * *

Driving with your headlights on day as well as night is a good safety precaution in the heavy traffic of a holiday weekend—or anytime you're on the highway. It makes other motorists especially aware of you and reminds them to drive carefully. Their oncoming lights help break the monotony of driving for you, particularly if you're traveling a seemingly endless stretch of expressway.

* * *

Good vision is essential to good driving. Before taking the wheel, be sure your sight isn't impaired by . . .

- Lack of glasses or proper lenses. Have your eyes checked frequently, with special reference to driving. If you normally wear glasses, be sure you have prescription sunglasses, too.
- Sunglasses with elaborate sidepieces or with lenses in tints that distort shapes and distances. (Sage green and grey are the best lens-colors.)
- Objects on the rear-view mirror, stickers on the back window, items on the back deck that block the window.
- Faulty headlight beams. Beams need periodic adjustment so they throw maximum light at the proper angle to the road.

On long-distance trips, stop and rest—or change drivers—whenever your eyes begin to feel tired.

On The Fence Row

By Tom Brown

BLOOMFIELD -- Farmers who are not taking advantage of governmental cost - sharing assistance on the application of lime which is available through the Agricultural Conservation Program administered through the County A.S.C.S. office would still do well to apply lime according to soil test. A soil test is still the best guide to the application of lime.

According to Agricultural Conservation Program regulations governing cost-sharing assistance on lime, the farmer must maintain a conserving crop on the land for at least one crop year following the application of lime obtained through this program. The conserving crop may consist of lespediza during the current year on new or old stands of biennial or perennial grasses or perennial legumes, and the crop year is considered to be from May 15 to August 15 for this purpose. Of course, this presents no problem in cases when the land is to be used for conserving acres, a small grain-lespedeza combination or where new or existing stands of permanent pastures are to be maintained. Due to the complications involved in arranging row crop rotations to meet these requirements, a number of farmers are taking their Agricultural Conservation Program benefits in the form of other practices and are applying them at their own expense. In some such cases, farmers are reluctant to use a soil test as a guide to the application of this lime since no soil test would be required.

For best results the Ph level of the soil, which is an indicator of soil activity, should be around 6 to 6.5. It is at this level that the farmer realizes maximum benefits from most of the plant food elements with which he is concerned. Specifically, a Ph level of 6 to 6.5 is the most desirable range for maximum availability of, and reaction from, nitrogen, phosphate, potash, calcium, magnesium, molybdenum, manganese, copper, zinc, iron, and aluminum. If the need of our soil for lime is great enough, some of our plant food elements are tied up chemically in a form which is unavailable to plants, and some of the minor elements create a toxic condition in the soil which is harmful to crops. On the other hand, if we apply too much lime, we can create a soil condition in which plant food elements are limited in their availability to crops. A soil test is your best guide in determining the proper amount of lime to apply.

Lime is a tremendously important item in my soil fertility program. In fact, it should be considered basic to a fertility program since it governs the availability of other plant food elements through the correction of the soil acidity. Lime adds calcium and magnesium to the soil both of which are bacteria and speeds up the decomposition of crop residues which improves the physical condition of the soil and increases the release of nitrogen from the soil organic matter. It is therefore important that the soil be limed and in the proper amount.

Now is a good time to take soil tests and apply lime to those fields on which the crop situation is such that it would be practical to do so.

SLOW VOYAGES

Slow voyages in fast sailing ships were an unglamorous part of seafaring that seldom gets mentioned today in romantic writings about the windjammer era. Although ships like Flying Cloud occasionally might sail 15,000 miles New York-to-San Francisco in 80 days, or cross 3,150 miles to Liverpool in 13 days, those exhilarating speeds were rare. Most sailing was slow. One voyage in 1899 turned out to be so sluggish that for a while even maritime experts didn't believe it. On February 20 the able 1,600-ton ship Red Rock left Australia for a Pacific island port 950 miles distant across the Coral Sea. Weeks passed, then months, and she didn't arrive. Finally Lloyd's of London posted her as missing -- equivalent to declaring her sunk -- and her insurers made ready to pay off. A few days later, on June 12, she came into port, her crew weary and hungry on short rations. There had been no mishap; she had simply met constant head winds into which, like all vessels with square sails, she had little ability to tack. She had spent almost a third of a year --112 days -- beating from side to side to make good an advance of only 8 1/2 miles a day. By completing the slowest voyage on record, Red Rock became also the only ship that has survived a Lloyd's "missing" listing.

Ann Landers

There's Safety in Methodist Handshake

Dear Ann Landers: Your definition of a "Methodist handshake" brought back some wonderful memories.

Many years ago, when I was sweet 16, a handsome chap who was a couple of years older, asked me to go to the downtown recreation center. (In those days, this was considered a very special date.)

We played table tennis, did a little imitation tap dancing, and harmonized with the piano player who had a handlebar moustache. After a strawberry soda, we waltzed to phonograph music and called it the end of a wonderful evening. He took me home on the streetcar and I was in seventh heaven.

When we reached the front door he asked if he could kiss me good night. I replied, "No. My mother wouldn't think it was very ladylike."

He looked at me in astonishment and asked, "What kind of a mother do you have, anyway?" I replied, "My mother is a Methodist." He smiled and answered, "O.K., then. Give me a Methodist handshake."

I shook his hand and shut the door. We moved away shortly after that and I never saw him again, but I will always remember that wonderful "Methodist handshake." I had not heard the expression in 40 years and then it popped up in your column -- so thanks, for reviving some beautiful memories. -- OHIO

Dear Ohio: Thank you for a delightful letter. If more 1967 evenings ended with a Methodist handshake my mail would be a lot lighter.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a woman in my middle 20's who learned awfully late what life was all about.

Last winter I became ill and lost my job. A man I knew slightly took an interest in me. He helped out with the rent, paid my doctor bills and brought me groceries.

Gradually we drifted into an intimate relationship. He moved in and we are now living together. This man is everything I want in a husband. I love him very much and he says he loves me, but whenever I mention marriage he says he can't afford it.

How can I get him to make this arrangement legal? I want a family. -- WIFE WITHNONAME

Dear No Name: Stop begging. Tell the guy to move out immediately and let him know it's an order -- not a request. If you aren't back at work, you should be. Inform him there will be no more playing house until you are his legal wife.

If he doesn't come around to your way of thinking within three months, write him off and find someone whose ideas are more like yours.

Dear Ann Landers: We have a summer cottage and we enjoy company. But we can't afford to entertain people around the clock seven days a week.

Water skiing is the big thing in this area but some folks don't realize how much it costs to run a boat hour after hour. The oil and gas bills are murder. We hate to mention it because it might sound cheap. Any suggestions? -- TAPPED OUT

Dear Tapped: When you feel a certain group has had enough -- simply say, "Sorry, we're out of petrol, kiddies." and don't fill the tank until they leave.

Give in or lose him . . . when a guy gives you this line, look out! For tips on how to handle the super sex salesman, check Ann Landers. Read her booklet, "Necking and Petting -- What Are The Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

If You Were the Judge

Hotel Guest Entitled To Privacy Judge Rules

By Jack Strauss, LL.D.

Luscious Lucy went on a vacation to sightsee, but it was a bell-hop who got the view. Staying at an expensive and fancy hotel, she caught the bell-hop watching her undress from behind a door in her room.

Wrapped only in embarrassment, Lucy forced the intruder out of her room and then sued the hotel for damages.

"When a woman undresses in her hotel room," she complained in court, "she's entitled to have privacy."

"It's not our fault if a bell-hop turns out to be a Peeping Tom," was the hotel's defense. "Bellhops are hired to lug luggage and not to peer at their peers."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the hotel pay because an employee played hide and seek with Lucy?

This is how the judge ruled: Lucy collected. The judge held that an innkeeper is bound to exercise reasonable care that neither he nor his servants shall be uncivil or harsh to a guest; that it may be considered a breach of contract if guests do not receive decent and respectful treatment -- with due allowance being made for the grade of the hotel. The better the hotel, the better the treatment required.

Soybean Seed Certification to August 10

BLOOMFIELD -- Farmers, who are producing the new cyst nematode - resistant Pickett variety of soybeans will have until Aug. 10 to submit applications for certifying seed of this variety, according to Tom Brown, Stoddard county extension director and agricultural agent.

The Missouri Seed Improvement association has postponed the application deadline to this date after which a 20 per cent penalty will be added to application costs.

Word received from the Seed Improvement association indicates that of approximately 12,000 acres of Pickett soybeans being grown in this area, certification applications have been received for only 4,000 acres. In spite of the fact that three new nematode - resistant varieities including Pickett, Custer, and Dyer are being produced this year, indications are that there will only be enough seed of these varities to plant less than one-third of the soybean acreage next spring. Widespread occurance of new infestations of cyst nematode will result in increased demand for seed of these resitant varieities.

FARM MANAGEMENT

By Richard F. McIntosh
Ext. Farm Mgnt. Agent

BENTON -- Ordinarily the first year cyst nematodes are observed in a field, the infested area is quite small (1/4 to 1/2 acre). However, this doesn't seem to be the case this year. Both the number of new infestations and the amount of injury is more severe. Several farmers have reported having severe damage on 5 acres or more on fields that showed no infestation last year.

Some of these fields produced 40 bushels of beans per acre last year.

NEW INFESTATIONS

Usually new infestations will show up on the lighter sandy spots in the field. The plants will first appear yellow and stunted, later some of the lower leaves will die and eventually some of the plants will die. Those plants which survive remain severely stunted and produce few or no beans.

VERIFYING INFESTATIONS

Actually it is quite simple to verify cyst nematode infestations. Dig up some of the affected plants and gently shake the dirt off the root system. If cyst nematodes are present they can be observed, without magnification, attached to the feeder roots. This time of year the cysts appear lemon yellow in color on soybeans that were planted in May.

Those on soybeans planted after wheat are pearly white. The color pattern for cyst is pearly white early in the season, lemon yellow as the season progresses and brownish colored late in the season.

SPREAD

Nematodes can move through the soil only a few inches each year by their own efforts.

Anything that moves soil from one area to another can spread nematodes, (machinery, equipment, root crops, and even birds).

REDUCING LOSSES

The two most practical means of reducing losses are crop rotation and resistant varities.

Host plants to the soybean cyst nematodes are soybeans, lespedeza, common vetch, snap-beans, and adzukie beans.

The losses from cyst nematode can be reduced by planting the infested fields in cotton or corn for two, preferably three years.

THREE RESISTANT VARIETIES

In the long run, resistant varieties are the most logical and practical means of eliminating losses.

At the present time the supply of nematode resistant seed is being expanded for three varieties. the following is a brief varietal description of these three:

PICKETT: Is yellow-seeded. It has purple flowers and gray pubescence. Yields have been satisfactory on cyst infested soil. It is resistant to bacterial postule, wildfire and target spot. It is NOT resistant to phytophthora root rot. It matures the last week in October. It was derived from a Lee back crossing program.

This year there were approximately 11,000 bushel of seed available for planting.

CUSTER: It was developed by the back crossing system using Scott as its main parent. Custer is similar to Scott in maturity (the first week in October) lodging, plant height and seed quality. It has purple flowers, gray pubesence, and yellow seeds with imperfect black hila.

Custer has resistance to phytophthora root rot. Yields have been comparable to Scott at the Delta Center at Portageville, Mo.

There were approximately 2,000 bu. planted in Missouri this year.

DYER: It is very similar to the Hill variety being approximately 5 days later, carrying resistance to the soybean cyst nematode and root knot nematode.

Yields of Dyer have been 2 to 3 bushels above Hill on loam soil at Portageville. On cyst nematode infested soil at Ridgely, Tennessee, yields were 45% greater than Hill during 1964-65, and at Portageville during 1966. Yields have been below Hill on heavy clay soil, where phytophthora root rot is a problem. It has purple flowers and tawny pubescence. The seed are yellow with black hila. There were only 725 bushels planted in Missouri this year.

Caste System

Traditionally, India's caste system was conceived to segregate Aryan conquerors from the aboriginal Dravidians and developed into a division of labor. Brahmans were the priests and scholars. Kshatriyas the warriors. Vaisyas the merchants and Sudras the workers. The untouchables were beyond caste and were condemned to the most menial tasks.

IT WOULD BE TOUGH DRIVING WITHOUT SIGNS...

You'd never get anywhere on today's complicated system of roads if you didn't have familiar signs to tell you where you're going and how to get there safely.

But shopping for your family is a lot more complicated than driving your car. And here, too, you couldn't get along without the guideposts—the manufacturers' brand names you know and trust.

Advertised brands have to be good. The manufacturer's reputation and sales future depend upon consistently delivering the kind of quality and satisfaction you've learned to expect.

They're the sort of products advertised in this newspaper. They're the sort of products you can buy with confidence in today's complicated world.

"Cold Feet"

The expression, "cold feet," meaning fear, started with soldiers in the 19th century. One of the chief ailments in battle was frozen feet, but it was also said that some soldiers feigned the trouble to avoid battle.

"Certainly I know what I did was wrong! I got caught, didn't I?"

August Will Be Cool and Wet

PORTAGEVILLE -- August weather will be cooler and wetter than normal according to the 30-day weather outlook for the Bootheel.

While centers of high pressure moving out of Canada should remain north of the region, cool air will be pulled southward in sufficient quantities to depress temperatures often enough to lower averages for the month below the 79.1 degree normal for the bootheel.

High pressure is not expected to be as dominant as usual across the southern states, leaving an opening for Gulf warmth and moisture to flow northward through the lower Mississippi Valley. The Bootheel lies on the northern fringe of an area expected to receive more than normal rainfall in August. Much of this can be looked for in showers and thunderstorms preceding and accompanying invasions of cool air.

Long term records for the Bootheel in previous Augusts with heavy precipitation show averages of 7 inches for Poplar Bluff, 6.97 inches for Sikeston and 6.18 inches for Caruthersville. Monthly totals range from 4.20 inches to 14.58, with all three stations reporting heaviest accumulations in 1915, not 1957.

Normal rainfall for August over the Bootheel as a whole is 3.19 inches. Normals for individual cities run in Cape Girardeau, 3.73 inches; Dexter, 3.44 inches; Morehouse 3.13 inches; Parma, 3.30 inches; Sikeston, 2.92 inches; Caruthersville, 3.04 inches; Doniphan, 3.61 inches; New Madrid, 3.09 inches and Poplar Bluff, 3.12 inches.

Short term averages for other cities are Advance, 3.08 inches; Bloomfield, 2.84 inches; Clearwater Dam, 3.05 inches; Kennett, 3.29 inches; Portageville, 2.94 inches; Qulin, 2.12 inches; Bernie, 2.62 inches; Charleston, 2.91 inches; Deering, 2.60 inches; Malden, 2.26 inches; Puxico, 2.55 inches and Wappapello Dam, 2.47 inches.

Normally evaporation and plant use demands about 3 inches more water than is provided by rain. This would make irrigation a beneficial and necessary requirement for soybeans and cotton. August is not likely to show as high a moisture deficit, particularly since soil moisture storage is in good supply in many sections. Exceptions may arise on sandier soils and in areas where July rainfall was limited.

Rain totals for Bootheel cities in July were: Poplar Bluff, 2.02 inches; Caruthersville, 6.40 inches; Sikeston, 3.49 inches; Kennett, 4.96 inches; Charleston, 3.55 inches; Portageville, 5.80 inches and Hayward, 5.22 inches.

Weather records tend to show that in an August with heavy rainfall we can expect as many as 2 to 4 days with rainfall greater than one inch. In general 10 to 13 days with rain in some amount is usual in a wet August. More cloudiness than usual is also indicated which will further tend to reduce temperature stresses and water use by plants.

Late cotton, maintained in a vegetative and fruiting stage by moist conditions may be more susceptible than usual to bollworm damage for a longer period this season. A regular check of fields would be beneficial and farmers should check recommendations of Extension Directors regarding control measures. Forecasts will permit maximum use of dry weather for scheduling controls, particularly if wet fields require aerial applications. The Flying Farmer Forecast issued each morning and evening will be helpful in determining whether winds or low clouds may limit the hours in which applications will be most likely to reach the target. The five day outlook is a good guide for scheduling applications for maximum retention of chemicals between rains.

Hay cutting and field curing, as well as preparation and fertilizing of pasture land for seeding later this fall can often be worked in between rains if forecasts and 5 day outlooks are used carefully. These are not sure cures for wet weather problems, but your chances for success are much greater when an operation is scheduled during periods with low probability of showery conditions.

Remember, too, that some of the thunderstorm activity anticipated during August might produce damaging winds or severe electrical disturbances. Swimmers, boating enthusiasts and fishermen can avoid potential hazards by moving off the water at the first sign of approaching storms. Forecasts can alert you to the chance for thunderstorms, and well-developed, dark clouds can be detected well in advance of their arrival.

Man Claims No Knowledge of Political Race

DETROIT (AP)— A Missouri sharecropper's son who says he's never been to school and never ran for election has been charged with failing to file a record of campaign expenses.

Circuit Judge George Bowles, Wayne County (Detroit) one-man grand jury, indicted James G. Williams.

Williams made no plea at his arraignment Thursday before Common Pleas Judge John D. O'Hair. He was released on personal bond to await trial Aug. 10.

The warrant filed by Bowles charges Williams failed to file "a full and true" account of his expenses in an unsuccessful race for auditor Aug. 2, 1966. The charge is a misdemeanor, punishable by two years in jail, $1,000 fine or both.

Williams came to court clutching a copy of the indictment and said he knew nothing about his name being on the ballot. He said he has trouble reading and writing.

"I don't even know what an auditor is," said Williams, "I'm just dumb to it. I don't have any education."

Williams, a paper hanger and painter, said he, his wife and six children are supported by $312 a month in welfare checks.

One day, Williams said, he was painting a man's house when the man had Williams sign some papers. Williams said he thought he was helping the man run for political office.

James Williams finished 17th in a field of 19, getting more than 3,000 votes in the election.

Farm Mishap Fatal to Man

CAPE GIRARDEAU - A farm accident Thursday afternoon took the life of Henry M. Gafford, 58, rural Jackson.

Gafford was killed when a tractor and brush hog mower he was operating on the Donald Oliver farm near Fruitland overturned, pinning him beneath.

Death is thought to have occurred about 4:45 p.m. Cape Girardeau County Coroner Donald Kremer said.

Kremer reported that Emmet Fallon, also of Jackson had talked to Gafford about 4 p.m. while he was mowing.

Fallon returned to the area about 5:30 p.m. to check on Gafford and found him beneath the equipment.

Both worked on the farm. Gafford had been assistant foreman since 1964.

Coroner Kremer said the accident apparently occurred as Gafford was driving the tractor and mower down a hill. One wheel dropped into a hole, causing them to overturn.

No inquest will be held, the coroner said.

U.S. Warplanes Continue to Pressure Viet North

SAIGON (AP) - U.S. warplanes kept up heavy pressure on North Vietnam Friday, flying 145 missions after a record 197 strikes the previous day, and a main target was the Communist guns which were shooting at them.

Air Force F105 Thunderchief pilots reported they destroyed at least 17 antiaircraft gun emplacements around the air field and railroad yard at Kep, 38 miles northeast of Hanoi.

Other pilots flew through heavy antiaircraft fire and surface-to-air missiles to hit other military targets and fuel storage areas.

The Communist fire brought down a Navy Skyhawk and the pilot was missing. It was the 636th announced U.S. warplane loss over the North.

Ground fighting continued in one of its periodic lulls, but South Vietnamese military headquarters said three infantry sweeps in the Viet Cong-infested Mekong delta had accounted for a total of 469 enemy dead in nine days.

The Viet Cong struck again at two U.S. military installations near Saigon.

For the second time in 10 days, the Communists unleashed a mortar attack on the base camp of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division's 3rd Brigade at Lai Khe, 30 miles north of Saigon.

The attack Friday night killed one American and wounded eight. A Communist rocket and mortar barrage on the base camp July 27 killed 11 U.S. soldiers and wounded 43.

The U.S. naval base at Nhe Be, eight miles southeast of Saigon, came under Communist recoilless rifle attack early today for the second time in three days.

The Navy said Communists fired eight or nine rounds of 75mm recoilless rifle rounds into the complex, but that only two hit the base. The others landed in the Long Tao river bordering the base, from which Navy patrol boats conduct operations against the Viet Cong in the delta.

The Navy said there were no casualties and only light damage to the facilities. In a heavier mortar and recoilless rifle shelling of the base and a nearby petroleum tank farm Thursday, 27 Americans and six Vietnamese were wounded and 1,000 55-gallon drums of fuel went up in flames.

A U.S. Marine security platoon guarding a bridge south of Da Nang came under heavy Communist attack early today. Two Marines were killed and 14 wounded.

Striking in darkness with small arms, automatic weapons, grenades and mortars, the Communist penetrated the Marine perimeter in two places. Two Marine bunkers were destroyed by what were believed to be 40mm rockets. Communists casulaties were not known.

Troops of the U.S. 25th Infantry Division reported destroying a Viet Cong grenade factory 24 miles northwest of Saigon. The Americans found a large underground room containing eight 55-gallon drums containing tools, castings, explosives and other grenade parts.

U.S. B52 bombers flew four missions over South Vietnam Friday, striking three times in the A Shau Valley, near the Laotian border 400 miles north of Saigon.

The command confirmed that American artillery accidentally shot down an ammunition-carrying C7 Caribou transport Thursday as it approached a Special Forces camp west of Quang Ngai City. The plane's three crewmen were killed.

The eight-engine B52 bombers flew four missions over South Vietnam Friday, striking three times in the A Shau Valley, near the Laotian border 400 miles north of Saigon.

A Shau, site of a former U.S. Special Force Green Beret outpost, is the first of many enemy concentration points in South Vietnam on the Ho Chi Minh trail. Intelligence sources report that flat-bed semi-trailers capable of hauling tons of weapons have been spotted in the valley recently.

The area has come under almost daily bombing since the North Vietnamese overran the Special Forces camp early last year. The raids Friday were aimed at enemy base camps, storage areas and fortifications.

The B52s also flew one mission against a training center and tunnel complex in Long Khanh Province, 50 miles northeast of Saigon.

In air raids against North Vietnam, F105 Thunderchiefs based in Thailand attacked a rail yard 30 miles north of Hanoi Friday and pilots reported damaging 20 railroad cars and destroying 300 feet of track.

Phantom jet pilots reported silencing 17 antiaircraft batteries around Kep airfield northeast of Hanoi, while Thunderchiefs struck at railroad yards nearby.

Navy pilots from the carriers Oriskany and Constellation said they destroyed or damaged 21 trucks, 21 boats and seven bridges.

A U.S. spokesman announced that four U.S. combat plane losses over the North not previously disclosed bought the total of such losses for the war to 635. American aircraft losses from all causes in the war on both sides of the border mounted to 2,511 - 1,549 planes and 962 helicopters.

Farmer Killed in Accident

A farmer was injured fatally in a single car accident Friday at 11:15 p.m. on highway N, a half-mile south of Illmo, when his car overturned.

Leslie Eifert, 56, route one, Illmo, driving a 1953 Chevrolet, was coming down hill rounding a curve, when his vehicle left the road.

He was taken to the Bisplinghoff Funeral Home in Illmo.

Eifert was born in Scott City, Feb. 10, 1911, son of Daniel Eifert and Mrs. Pauline Eifert.

Surviving are one son, Kenneth Eifert, Cape Girardeau; two brothers, David Eifert, Scott City, and William Eifert, St. Louis; four sisters, Mrs. Elmer Uelsmann, Illmo, Mrs. Charles Glueck, Jackson, Mrs. A.E. Landgraf, Cape Girardeau and Miss Elsie Eifert, St. Louis; and two grandchildren.

Family Decides To Sell After Water Dispute

MATTHEWS-- The R. E. Hartline family have advertised their home to "colored" people only. They also are putting up a second house and eight lots for sale on the same basis.

It acted after their city water was cut off last night. The family had refused to pay a water bill for three months.

Members of the family said the refusal was because a broken water line caused dirty water to come into their property.

There are no Negroes living in the community now.

City officials were notified of the broken line, according to the family, but it went unrepaired until recently.

The family carried their water supply from a church a block away while the main was broken.

Wyatt Store Burglarized

WYATT -- About $150 in merchandise was stolen from the Wyatt Mercantile Company Thursday night, Sheriff W. J. "Pedro" Simmons reported.

Items taken included watches, knives and clothing. About $50 worth of merchandise has been recovered.

Witnesses saw three Negroes dropping merchandise along the side of a road. Part of the merchandise recovered was found in a lard can which had about two inches of water in it, indicating that it had been taken before the heavy rain Thursday night.

Other merchandise found was dry, indicating that it had been taken after the rain storm. Simmons said the burglars probably had entered the store more than once Thursday night.

Three juveniles were picked up for questioning and one is being held.

A BASKETBALL COURT of two inches of gravel base and three inches of cement, is laid out by National Youth Corps enrollees and members of American Jewish Society for Service, at Delmo's North Lilbourn project.

Jewish Society Gives Assist to Delmo

NORTH LILBOURN -- "It is the first school summer vacation we have had where we feel we have accomplished something, and one we will remember for many years," Paul Kleinbaum said.

Kleinbaum, 16, of Rutherford, N.J., is one of 18 eastern high school juniors and seniors participating in the American Jewish Society for Service project this summer in five Southeast Missouri counties.

The teenagers are repairing and repainting houses at Delmo housing projects in Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Dunklin and Stoddard counties.

The Delmo Corporation is a non-profit philanthropic organization that seeks to pilot needed projects in Missouri for which federal funds are available. It is headquartered at Lilbourn.

The AJSS is an independent national organization started in 1950 to give Jews and those of other faiths an opportunity to perform humanitarian service in fulfillment of the highest teachings of Judaism.

The society conducts voluntary work service summer camps to enable young people to live their faith by serving others.

The group, which arrived here July 3, is one of three AJSS groups working in the United States this summer.

The other two groups are working at Lackawanna, N. Y., and Crown Point, N. M.

At Lackawanna, near Buffalo, the teenagers assist in an urban renewal project. At Crown Point they are helping develop a Navajo Indian recreation project to increase tourism.

Each group is composed of nine boys and nine girls. An unusual aspect of the society's project is that each teenager pays $300 for the privilege of working in the summer program.

Since coming to Southeast Missouri's Bootheel, the volunteers have worked at five Delmo housing units.

At North Lilbourn they painted eight houses, replaced siding on other houses and made other carpentry repairs.

At Wyatt they painted five houses and fixed the roof on another. They have also begun painting houses at Wardell.

Ed Cohen, a social studies teacher at Long Beach, N.Y., and a member of AJSS, is serving as director of the project in the Bootheel.

"In times of riots and demonstrations, this is our solution for young people interested in action," Cohen said. "We feel that a peace corps service is the most constructive and meaningful at this point.

"Our purpose is to give youngsters opportunity to put Jewish ethics and values to work. There are other goals, but primarily the service is aimed at helping a person to help himself."

Cohen said the youngsters also involve in their work those people whom they help.

"One of the root problems is the image the impoverished have of themselves, and in order to motivate them you have to orient them to self respect," he said.

"Most of the people we work with don't have much community spirit and don't work together; they simply weren't organized to do this sort of thing," he said.

Educational, informational discussions about Southeast Missouri are arranged for the volunteers by their sponsor, the Delmo Corporation.

Speakers have familiarized them with problems of farming in the Bootheel, problems of the National Youth Corps and the poverty problems of this primarily agrarian part of the state.

Other learning experiences are provided in such activities as the Head Start program in Lilbourn, where they volunteer their services one day a week.

Cohen pointed out that the youngsters' experiences of working with low-income families have had a great impact upon their thinking.

"They have thought, until now, that when inequities exist the problems can be solved by changing things in Congress," he said. "But they're finding out that just because something clicks in Washington, D. C., it doesn't mean that the same thing will click in Lilbourn, Mo., and produce miraculous results.

"They aren't so convinced that a crash program is the answer, as opposed to long-term working out of a number of interrelated problems, such as education."

The volunteers work from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. five days a week.

When the youngsters were asked why they pay $300 plus traveling and recreational expense for the privilege of working, they generally agreed that the money has been well spent.

"We are here because we feel we have to help people less fortunate than we," Kleinberg remarked. "We are all Jewish and we are learning to live with other Jewish youngsters."

Stanley Klein of New York City, one of the group counselors and a graduate student at Northwestern University in Chicago, said that one purpose of the AJSS projects is to emphasize the role of Jews in history: "Jews see it as their calling to help others. Because they have been persecuted throughout their history, they are supposed to understand the problems of others. They want to help those in need."

Another youngster said that he will return to New York with a new awareness of how others live.

In appointing out the problems the volunteers have faced, Klein said the biggest problem was in lack of communication with those whom the volunteers are helping.

While the volunteers repair houses, their occupants oftentimes remain indoors.

"It's hard to work without knowing who you are working for," Aline Mayer, 16, of Yonkers, N. H., said.

The youngsters reported they did enjoy the response they received at the Circle City Delmo project.

Residents served them a home-cooked buffet dinner.

The youngsters are especially proud of a project which they initiated themselves at North Lilbourn. They donated $150 of their own money toward a $400 recreation project at the North Lilbourn community center.

Included in the project is a paved basketball court. Land also is being cleared for a baseball field.

Explaining why they have undertaken this extra project, Klein said: "Paint gets dirty and shingles will fall off. We wanted to build something that will last."

Five Killed, 65 Hurt in Truck

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — A flatbed truck carrying a YMCA youngsters' club home from a day on a Pacific Ocean beach somersaulted out of control Friday on the Nimitz Freeway, killing five and injuring 65 others.

Larry Fink, newly sworn in California High Patrol officer who saw the accident, declared: "I didn't realize how bad it was until I got up to the cab of the truck and all I saw was a mound of bodies."

The average cacao tree yields between 20 and 40 pods a year, and each pod contains

Ten Crewmen Escape Unharmed From Towboat

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)— Rescue craft picked up 10 crewmen from the Mississippi River near here Friday night after their towboat Ouachita exploded and sank.

None of the crewmen, who fled the burning vessel in lifeboats only moments before the sinking, were injured.

The towboat was pulling six barges loaded with some 12,000 tons of rock for revetment and dike work.

Crewmen reported the Ouachita erupted into flames shortly after an explosion was heard in the towboat's engine room. The cause was undetermined.

Coast Guard and harbor patrol rescue units rushed to the scene and assisted in rescuing crewmen and securing the six barges on the Mississippi side of the river.

The accident occurred 17 miles south of the Memphis-Arkansas bridge.

The $300,000 towboat was owned by Hillman Logan of Greenville, Miss., and was 15 years old.

Logan said the Ouachita left Caruthersville, Mo., early Friday.

Tugboat Capt. Elwood Haney and most of his nine crewmen were from Greenville, Logan said.

Gasoline War Cease Fire

No shots were fired among competing gasoline dealers Friday, but the gas war, which ended Thursday, broke out again today.

Major brand dealers are now selling regular for 28.9 cents per gallon and premium for 32.9 cents per gallon.

Independent dealers are selling regular for 26.9 cents per gallon and premium for 29.9 cents per gallon.

Independent dealers seem to be running the gas war. It broke out about four weeks ago, when three independent dealers undercut the going prices charged by other independents. The remaining independent dealers then undercut them, and the majors lowered their prices.

The close of the price war announced Wednesday, came after a meeting of independents, who agreed on the new prices.

However, one independent decided to keep his prices at the 26.9 and 28.9. Another independent then dropped his price first one cent then two cents per gallon on Thursday and Friday.

Today all the independents lowered their prices and the majors followed suit.

A long established independent gasoline dealer said today that the price now charged is expected to remain for "some time." Any further increases or decreases are expected to be gradual.

The present prices are not so low that anybody can't make a living, but they're not making the margin of profit that some would like, he said.

Taylor, Clifford Back From Far East Mission

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential envoys Clark Clifford and Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor returned from their Southeast Asian trip today reporting they found general agreement among the allies on how to push ahead with the Vietnam war.

"A great degree of concensus," was how Taylor summed up the attitude of allied leaders on which he was slated to report to President Johnson this afternoon.

"There was unanimous agreement among all the allies that the bombing should be carried on at its present level or possibly at an increased level," Clifford added.

And there was no reluctance expressed about sending more troops to Vietnam from other allied countries, Taylor said, "because we were not asking for more troops."

Johnson dispatched the two senior presidential advisers to talk with the chiefs of the countries who have forces fighting the Communists in Vietnam. Their two-week trip took them to South Vietnam, Thailand, Australia, New Zealand and South Korea.

Taylor is the former U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam and Clifford, a Washington lawyer, has been an adviser to Johnson and other Democratic presidents.

While little concrete information has been given out concerning the Clifford-Taylor mission, Johnson apparently sent his senior confidants to talk with the leaders of the nations with troops in South Vietnam to:

-Check on the progress of the military and political-economic campaigns in South Vietnam.

- Give the allied chiefs Johnson's latest views on the Vietnam effort.

- Receive the views of the allied leaders and relay them to Johnson.

- Survey prospects for the next Vietnam summit parley. The last such summit gathering was at Manila last October. The next one is expected in Seoul or Bangkok this fall.

Washington sources said the outlook for peace negotiations with North Vietnam was also within the wide scope of the discussions by Clifford and Taylor in the allied capitals. But they said there was no talk of a dramatic new peace offensive.

Appeal to Support Rodeo Gets Response

An initial purchase of 100 Jaycee Bootheel rodeo tickets was made today by J. Ernest Harper, manager of McKnight Keaton Grocery Co.

Some of the tickets will be given to employes. The remainder will be given to customers who buy a certain amount of the firm's products, Harper said.

The 100 tickets were ordered today in response to a Jaycee letter sent to Sikeston merchants urging support of the annual rodeo. The show opens Thursday.

The letter explains that the purpose of the event is to stimulate activity within the community and surveys have proved it has succeeded.

However, due to bad weather in past years, the rodeo is now in debt to the tune of $11,000. Unless this year is profitable, the event may be discontinued, the letter stated.

Profits from rodeos in the past paid for the football stadium and other civic improvements.

The letter closes with a message uring promotion among the merchants' employes and customers.

Harper said today he hopes to be able to purchase more tickets later, and expressed the hope that other merchants will follow the example and support the rodeo.

Open Verdict In Inquest of Tetley Death

IRONTON - A coroner's jury returned an open verdict at an inquest last night into the death of Robert E. Tetley, 63, of Oran.

The jury's verdict stated that Tetley had died from a gunshot wound in the temple fired by a person or persons unknown.

Tetley was found dead Tuesday morning at a farmhouse east of Belleview. He had been shot twice with a .22 caliber gun.

Edward Howard, 61, of St. Louis has been charged with first degree murder in the death. At his preliminary hearing Wednesday the magistrate judge asked that Howard be given a psychiatric examination at the state hospital at Fulton to determine whether he is sane and can stand trial on the charges.

Coin Machines Burglarized

A breakin at Ferrell Auto Salvage Co., 1615 West Malone, was discovered by Bob Hileman, an employe, at 7:30 a.m. today, police reported.

An undetermined amount of money was taken from a vending machine and a cash register. Cigarettes also were taken from the vending machine.

Investigating officer Isaiah Dunn said the thieves apparently entered through a window on the south side of the building by breaking the window pane and unlatching the lock.

The burglar or burglars apparently left through the front door.

The theft of a red Speed Mobile go-kart with a red checkered flag tied to the seat was reported to police at 2 p.m. Friday.

Bill Paxton, Oran, told police the vehicle valued at $45 was taken from a room on the south side of the building that houses the Davis Coin-a-matic Laundry, 867 West Malone.

Ike Rushed To Hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, stricken ill at his Gettysburg, Pa., farm, was flown by helicopter to Walter Reed hospital today.

The 76-year-old five-star general arrived at the hospital shortly before noon, clad in pajamas and bathrobe.

There was no immediate word on the nature of his ailment.

Eisenhower was helped from the helicopter by a hospital aide and walked from the landing pad to a nearby car for the short trip to the hospital.

Eisenhower was hospitalized last May for eight days following an attack of gastroenteritis — an inflammation of the lining of the stomach and small intestine.

Since his recovery, he made one trip back to the hospital, a 42-hour stay last July 10-12 for what was described as a routine physical examination and dental work. Doctors said then he was in good shape.

Youth Held in Slaying of Three

GEORGETOWN, Tex. (AP) — Gunfire in early morning wiped out a college professor, his wife and their 17-year-old daughter.

Officers held a teen-aged son of the couple but refused to discuss the case beyond the facts that the three were killed with a .22 - caliber rifle early today.

Victims were Dr. Gordon Wolcott, 56; his wise, Elizabeth, 43; and their daughter, also named Elizabeth.

The Wolcotts have a 15-year-old son. Police said the youth was taken before a county judge and advised of his constitutional rights.

No charges were filed.

U.S. Warplanes Continue to Pressure Viet North

SAIGON (AP) - U.S. warplanes kept up heavy pressure on North Vietnam Friday, flying 145 missions after a record 197 strikes the previous day, and a main target was the Communist guns which were shooting at them.

Air Force F105 Thunderchief pilots reported they destroyed at least 17 antiaircraft gun emplacements around the air field and railroad yard at Kep, 38 miles northeast of Hanoi.

Other pilots flew through heavy antiaircraft fire and surface-to-air missiles to hit other military targets and fuel storage areas.

The Communist fire brought down a Navy Skyhawk and the pilot was missing. It was the 636th announced U.S. warplane loss over the North.

Ground fighting continued in one of its periodic lulls, but South Vietnamese military headquarters said three infantry sweeps in the Viet Cong-infested Mekong delta had accounted for a total of 469 enemy dead in nine days.

The Viet Cong struck again at two U.S. military installations near Saigon.

For the second time in 10 days, the Communists unleashed a mortar attack on the base camp of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division's 3rd Brigade at Lai Khe, 30 miles north of Saigon.

The attack Friday night killed one American and wounded eight. A Communist rocket and mortar barrage on the base camp July 27 killed 11 U.S. soldiers and wounded 43.

The U.S. naval base at Nhe Be, eight miles southeast of Saigon, came under Communist recoilless rifle attack early today for the second time in three days.

The Navy said Communists fired eight or nine rounds of 75mm recoilless rifle rounds into the complex, but that only two hit the base. The others landed in the Long Tao river bordering the base, from which Navy patrol boats conduct operations against the Viet Cong in the delta.

The Navy said there were no casualties and only light damage to the facilities. In a heavier mortar and recoilless rifle shelling of the base and a nearby petroleum tank farm Thursday, 27 Americans and six Vietnamese were wounded and 1,000 55-gallon drums of fuel went up in flames.

A U.S. Marine security platoon guarding a bridge south of Da Nang came under heavy Communist attack early today. Two Marines were killed and 14 wounded.

Striking in darkness with small arms, automatic weapons, grenades and mortars, the Communist penetrated the Marine perimeter in two places. Two Marine bunkers were destroyed by what were believed to be 40mm rockets. Communists casulaties were not known.

Troops of the U.S. 25th Infantry Division reported destroying a Viet Cong grenade factory 24 miles northwest of Saigon. The Americans found a large underground room containing eight 55-gallon drums containing tools, castings, explosives and other grenade parts.

U.S. B52 bombers flew four missions over South Vietnam Friday, striking three times in the A Shau Valley, near the Laotian border 400 miles north of Saigon.

The command confirmed that American artillery accidentally shot down an ammunition-carrying C7 Caribou transport Thursday as it approached a Special Forces camp west of Quang Ngai City. The plane's three crewmen were killed.

The eight-engine B52 bombers flew four missions over South Vietnam Friday, striking three times in the A Shau Valley, near the Laotian border 400 miles north of Saigon.

A Shau, site of a former U.S. Special Force Green Beret outpost, is the first of many enemy concentration points in South Vietnam on the Ho Chi Minh trail. Intelligence sources report that flat-bed semi-trailers capable of hauling tons of weapons have been spotted in the valley recently.

The area has come under almost daily bombing since the North Vietnamese overran the Special Forces camp early last year. The raids Friday were aimed at enemy base camps, storage areas and fortifications.

The B52s also flew one mission against a training center and tunnel complex in Long Khanh Province, 50 miles northeast of Saigon.

In air raids against North Vietnam, F105 Thunderchiefs based in Thailand attacked a rail yard 30 miles north of Hanoi Friday and pilots reported damaging 20 railroad cars and destroying 300 feet of track.

Phantom jet pilots reported silencing 17 antiaircraft batteries around Kep airfield northeast of Hanoi, while Thunderchiefs struck at railroad yards nearby.

Navy pilots from the carriers Oriskany and Constellation said they destroyed or damaged 21 trucks, 21 boats and seven bridges.

A U.S. spokesman announced that four U.S. combat plane losses over the North not previously disclosed bought the total of such losses for the war to 635. American aircraft losses from all causes in the war on both sides of the border mounted to 2,511 - 1,549 planes and 962 helicopters.

Farmer Killed in Accident

A farmer was injured fatally in a single car accident Friday at 11:15 p.m. on highway N, a half-mile south of Illmo, when his car overturned.

Leslie Eifert, 56, route one, Illmo, driving a 1953 Chevrolet, was coming down hill rounding a curve, when his vehicle left the road.

He was taken to the Bisplinghoff Funeral Home in Illmo.

Eifert was born in Scott City, Feb. 10, 1911, son of Daniel Eifert and Mrs. Pauline Eifert.

Surviving are one son, Kenneth Eifert, Cape Girardeau; two brothers, David Eifert, Scott City, and William Eifert, St. Louis; four sisters, Mrs. Elmer Uelsmann, Illmo, Mrs. Charles Glueck, Jackson, Mrs. A.E. Landgraf, Cape Girardeau and Miss Elsie Eifert, St. Louis; and two grandchildren.

Family Decides To Sell After Water Dispute

MATTHEWS-- The R. E. Hartline family have advertised their home to "colored" people only. They also are putting up a second house and eight lots for sale on the same basis.

It acted after their city water was cut off last night. The family had refused to pay a water bill for three months.

Members of the family said the refusal was because a broken water line caused dirty water to come into their property.

There are no Negroes living in the community now.

City officials were notified of the broken line, according to the family, but it went unrepaired until recently.

The family carried their water supply from a church a block away while the main was broken.

Wyatt Store Burglarized

WYATT -- About $150 in merchandise was stolen from the Wyatt Mercantile Company Thursday night, Sheriff W. J. "Pedro" Simmons reported.

Items taken included watches, knives and clothing. About $50 worth of merchandise has been recovered.

Witnesses saw three Negroes dropping merchandise along the side of a road. Part of the merchandise recovered was found in a lard can which had about two inches of water in it, indicating that it had been taken before the heavy rain Thursday night.

Other merchandise found was dry, indicating that it had been taken after the rain storm. Simmons said the burglars probably had entered the store more than once Thursday night.

Three juveniles were picked up for questioning and one is being held.

A BASKETBALL COURT of two inches of gravel base and three inches of cement, is laid out by National Youth Corps enrollees and members of American Jewish Society for Service, at Delmo's North Lilbourn project.

Jewish Society Gives Assist to Delmo

NORTH LILBOURN -- "It is the first school summer vacation we have had where we feel we have accomplished something, and one we will remember for many years," Paul Kleinbaum said.

Kleinbaum, 16, of Rutherford, N.J., is one of 18 eastern high school juniors and seniors participating in the American Jewish Society for Service project this summer in five Southeast Missouri counties.

The teenagers are repairing and repainting houses at Delmo housing projects in Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Dunklin and Stoddard counties.

The Delmo Corporation is a non-profit philanthropic organization that seeks to pilot needed projects in Missouri for which federal funds are available. It is headquartered at Lilbourn.

The AJSS is an independent national organization started in 1950 to give Jews and those of other faiths an opportunity to perform humanitarian service in fulfillment of the highest teachings of Judaism.

The society conducts voluntary work service summer camps to enable young people to live their faith by serving others.

The group, which arrived here July 3, is one of three AJSS groups working in the United States this summer.

The other two groups are working at Lackawanna, N. Y., and Crown Point, N. M.

At Lackawanna, near Buffalo, the teenagers assist in an urban renewal project. At Crown Point they are helping develop a Navajo Indian recreation project to increase tourism.

Each group is composed of nine boys and nine girls. An unusual aspect of the society's project is that each teenager pays $300 for the privilege of working in the summer program.

Since coming to Southeast Missouri's Bootheel, the volunteers have worked at five Delmo housing units.

At North Lilbourn they painted eight houses, replaced siding on other houses and made other carpentry repairs.

At Wyatt they painted five houses and fixed the roof on another. They have also begun painting houses at Wardell.

Ed Cohen, a social studies teacher at Long Beach, N.Y., and a member of AJSS, is serving as director of the project in the Bootheel.

"In times of riots and demonstrations, this is our solution for young people interested in action," Cohen said. "We feel that a peace corps service is the most constructive and meaningful at this point.

"Our purpose is to give youngsters opportunity to put Jewish ethics and values to work. There are other goals, but primarily the service is aimed at helping a person to help himself."

Cohen said the youngsters also involve in their work those people whom they help.

"One of the root problems is the image the impoverished have of themselves, and in order to motivate them you have to orient them to self respect," he said.

"Most of the people we work with don't have much community spirit and don't work together; they simply weren't organized to do this sort of thing," he said.

Educational, informational discussions about Southeast Missouri are arranged for the volunteers by their sponsor, the Delmo Corporation.

Speakers have familiarized them with problems of farming in the Bootheel, problems of the National Youth Corps and the poverty problems of this primarily agrarian part of the state.

Other learning experiences are provided in such activities as the Head Start program in Lilbourn, where they volunteer their services one day a week.

Cohen pointed out that the youngsters' experiences of working with low-income families have had a great impact upon their thinking.

"They have thought, until now, that when inequities exist the problems can be solved by changing things in Congress," he said. "But they're finding out that just because something clicks in Washington, D. C., it doesn't mean that the same thing will click in Lilbourn, Mo., and produce miraculous results.

"They aren't so convinced that a crash program is the answer, as opposed to long-term working out of a number of interrelated problems, such as education."

The volunteers work from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. five days a week.

When the youngsters were asked why they pay $300 plus traveling and recreational expense for the privilege of working, they generally agreed that the money has been well spent.

"We are here because we feel we have to help people less fortunate than we," Kleinberg remarked. "We are all Jewish and we are learning to live with other Jewish youngsters."

Stanley Klein of New York City, one of the group counselors and a graduate student at Northwestern University in Chicago, said that one purpose of the AJSS projects is to emphasize the role of Jews in history:

"Jews see it as their calling to help others. Because they have been persecuted throughout their history, they are supposed to understand the problems of others. They want to help those in need."

Another youngster said that he will return to New York with a new awareness of how others live.

In appointing out the problems the volunteers have faced, Klein said the biggest problem was in lack of communication with those whom the volunteers are helping.

While the volunteers repair houses, their occupants oftentimes remain indoors.

"It's hard to work without knowing who you are working for," Aline Mayer, 16, of Yonkers, N. H., said.

The youngsters reported they did enjoy the response they received at the Circle City Delmo project.

Residents served them a home-cooked buffet dinner.

The youngsters are especially proud of a project which they initiated themselves at North Lilbourn. They donated $150 of their own money toward a $400 recreation project at the North Lilbourn community center.

Included in the project is a paved basketball court. Land also is being cleared for a baseball field.

Explaining why they have undertaken this extra project, Klein said: "Paint gets dirty and shingles will fall off. We wanted to build something that will last."

Five Killed, 65 Hurt in Truck

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — A flatbed truck carrying a YMCA youngsters' club home from a day on a Pacific Ocean beach somersaulted out of control Friday on the Nimitz Freeway, killing five and injuring 65 others.

Larry Fink, newly sworn in California High Patrol officer who saw the accident, declared: "I didn't realize how bad it was until I got up to the cab of the truck and all I saw was a mound of bodies."

Ten Crewmen Escape Unharmed From Towboat

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)— Rescue craft picked up 10 crewmen from the Mississippi River near here Friday night after their towboat Ouachita exploded and sank.

None of the crewmen, who fled the burning vessel in lifeboats only moments before the sinking, were injured.

The towboat was pulling six barges loaded with some 12,000 tons of rock for revetment and dike work.

Crewmen reported the Ouachita erupted into flames shortly after an explosion was heard in the towboat's engine room. The cause was undetermined.

Coast Guard and harbor patrol rescue units rushed to the scene and assisted in rescuing crewmen and securing the six barges on the Mississippi side of the river.

The accident occurred 17 miles south of the Memphis-Arkansas bridge.

The $300,000 towboat was owned by Hillman Logan of Greenville, Miss., and was 15 years old.

Logan said the Ouachita left Caruthersville, Mo., early Friday.

Tugboat Capt. Elwood Haney and most of his nine crewmen were from Greenville, Logan said.

Gasoline War Cease Fire

No shots were fired among competing gasoline dealers Friday, but the gas war, which ended Thursday, broke out again today.

Major brand dealers are now selling regular for 28.9 cents per gallon and premium for 32.9 cents per gallon.

Independent dealers are selling regular for 26.9 cents per gallon and premium for 29.9 cents per gallon.

Independent dealers seem to be running the gas war. It broke out about four weeks ago, when three independent dealers undercut the going prices charged by other independents. The remaining independent dealers then undercut them, and the majors lowered their prices.

The close of the price war announced Wednesday, came after a meeting of independents, who agreed on the new prices.

However, one independent decided to keep his prices at the 26.9 and 28.9. Another independent then dropped his price first one cent then two cents per gallon on Thursday and Friday.

Today all the independents lowered their prices and the majors followed suit.

A long established independent gasoline dealer said today that the price now charged is expected to remain for "some time." Any further increases or decreases are expected to be gradual.

The present prices are not so low that anybody can't make a living, but they're not making the margin of profit that some would like, he said.

Taylor, Clifford Back From Far East Mission

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential envoys Clark Clifford and Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor returned from their Southeast Asian trip today reporting they found general agreement among the allies on how to push ahead with the Vietnam war.

"A great degree of concensus," was how Taylor summed up the attitude of allied leaders on which he was slated to report to President Johnson this afternoon.

"There was unanimous agreement among all the allies that the bombing should be carried on at its present level or possibly at an increased level," Clifford added.

And there was no reluctance expressed about sending more troops to Vietnam from other allied countries, Taylor said, "because we were not asking for more troops."

Johnson dispatched the two senior presidential advisers to talk with the chiefs of the countries who have forces fighting the Communists in Vietnam. Their two-week trip took them to South Vietnam, Thailand, Australia, New Zealand and South Korea.

Taylor is the former U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam and Clifford, a Washington lawyer, has been an adviser to Johnson and other Democratic presidents.

While little concrete information has been given out concerning the Clifford-Taylor mission, Johnson apparently sent his senior confidants to talk with the leaders of the nations with troops in South Vietnam to:

-Check on the progress of the military and political-economic campaigns in South Vietnam.

- Give the allied chiefs Johnson's latest views on the Vietnam effort.

- Receive the views of the allied leaders and relay them to Johnson.

- Survey prospects for the next Vietnam summit parley. The last such summit gathering was at Manila last October. The next one is expected in Seoul or Bangkok this fall.

Washington sources said the outlook for peace negotiations with North Vietnam was also within the wide scope of the discussions by Clifford and Taylor in the allied capitals. But they said there was no talk of a dramatic new peace offensive.

Appeal to Support Rodeo Gets Response

An initial purchase of 100 Jaycee Bootheel rodeo tickets was made today by J. Ernest Harper, manager of McKnight Keaton Grocery Co.

Some of the tickets will be given to employes. The remainder will be given to customers who buy a certain amount of the firm's products, Harper said.

The 100 tickets were ordered today in response to a Jaycee letter sent to Sikeston merchants urging support of the annual rodeo. The show opens Thursday.

The letter explains that the purpose of the event is to stimulate activity within the community and surveys have proved it has succeeded.

However, due to bad weather in past years, the rodeo is now in debt to the tune of $11,000. Unless this year is profitable, the event may be discontinued, the letter stated.

Profits from rodeos in the past paid for the football stadium and other civic improvements.

The letter closes with a message uring promotion among the merchants' employes and customers.

Harper said today he hopes to be able to purchase more tickets later, and expressed the hope that other merchants will follow the example and support the rodeo.

Open Verdict In Inquest of Tetley Death

IRONTON - A coroner's jury returned an open verdict at an inquest last night into the death of Robert E. Tetley, 63, of Oran.

The jury's verdict stated that Tetley had died from a gunshot wound in the temple fired by a person or persons unknown.

Tetley was found dead Tuesday morning at a farmhouse east of Belleview. He had been shot twice with a .22 caliber gun.

Edward Howard, 61, of St. Louis has been charged with first degree murder in the death. At his preliminary hearing Wednesday the magistrate judge asked that Howard be given a psychiatric examination at the state hospital at Fulton to determine whether he is sane and can stand trial on the charges.

Coin Machines Burglarized

A breakin at Ferrell Auto Salvage Co., 1615 West Malone, was discovered by Bob Hileman, an employe, at 7:30 a.m. today, police reported.

An undetermined amount of money was taken from a vending machine and a cash register. Cigarettes also were taken from the vending machine.

Investigating officer Isaiah Dunn said the thieves apparently entered through a window on the south side of the building by breaking the window pane and unlatching the lock.

The burglar or burglars apparently left through the front door.

The theft of a red Speed Mobile go-kart with a red checkered flag tied to the seat was reported to police at 2 p.m. Friday.

Ike Rushed To Hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, stricken ill at his Gettysburg, Pa., farm, was flown by helicopter to Walter Reed hospital today.

The 76-year-old five-star general arrived at the hospital shortly before noon, clad in pajamas and bathrobe.

There was no immediate word on the nature of his ailment.

Eisenhower was helped from the helicopter by a hospital aide and walked from the landing pad to a nearby car for the short trip to the hospital.

Eisenhower was hospitalized last May for eight days following an attack of gastroenteritis — an inflammation of the lining of the stomach and small intestine.

Since his recovery, he made one trip back to the hospital, a 42-hour stay last July 10-12 for what was described as a routine physical examination and dental work. Doctors said then he was in good shape.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Holidays generally are a time for gaiety and fun. An exception is Supplication Day, celebrated only in the Virgin Islands.

This is the day that residents of the Virgin Islands go to church and pray that their islands will not be hit by a hurricane.

Their prayers have been answered every year since 1932. Other places haven't been so lucky.

Virgin Islanders regard July 25 - Supplication Day - as the beginning of the hurricane season. Actually, hurricanes have been known to occur in every month but April. The U.S. Weather Bureau regards their main period as running from June 1 to Nov. 15, with September the most dangerous month.

A hurricane is a whirling storm measuring several hundred miles across, with winds blowing at 75 miles an hour or more. The center is a calm area, called the "eye", that measures about 20 miles across and has little wind or cloudiness. The fury of the hurricane begins at the edge of the eye - and it is fury.

Towering cloud masses produce heavy rains. The terrible winds build up killer waves; waves that even the strongest ship would be lucky to survive. Just 10 years ago Germany proclaimed a state of national mourning when a training ship, full of merchant marine cadets, was hit by a hurricane and went down with 80 men and boys - virtually her entire crew.

Hurricane winds usually are not more than 100 miles an hour, but sometimes they may blow up to almost 200 miles an hour.

These terrible winds also drive the water before them, so that a "storm tide" rises along a shore line as a hurricane approaches. If the storm tide comes at the same time as the normal high tide, the water may rise several feet. The storm tide of a hurricane at Galveston, Texas, in 1900, drowned 6,000 persons. The water rose four feet in a few seconds.

There is one additional danger. As a hurricane moves over land, it may continue to cause heavy rains even after the winds fall below hurricane force. These rains may cause floods - killer floods. One of the floods in Connecticut in 1955 was caused by Hurricane Diane. Combined with another flood which occurred later in 1955, almost 120 people were killed.

Meteorologists of the U.S. Weather Bureau's Hurricane Warning Service carefully watch the weather reports from the Atlantic and Caribbean, and pictures of cloud systems taken by weather satellites. When they believe a new hurricane has been born, they send out planes to locate it and estimate its strength and direction.

Hour after hours, day and night, the storm's progress is checked, and warnings are issued to areas in its path.

If you should hear such warnings, take heed. Anyone who has lived through a hurricane never forgets it. Too many people have been hit by a hurricane and failed to live.

QUESTIONS REMAIN FOR SENATOR LONG

Sen. Edward V. Long has spoken in the Senate and to the Senate ethics committee about his invasion of privacy investigations and the fees he has received from a St. Louis law firm.

We would guess that the ethics committee will want to continue its preliminary research out of fairness to both the Senate and to Senator Long. We are certain that the voters of Missouri want to know more about those fees.

The senator really did not shed light on that matter. He said that none of the cases involved a conflict of interest and that the names of the clients could not be disclosed.

Perhaps this will be enough for the Senate, but we doubt whether it will be enough for the voters, who are entitled to information beyond generalities. It is true that the Senate does not require disclosure and that the ethics committee has yet to establish clear lines of conduct.

But if there is a lawyer-client relationship there also is a senator-constituent relationship. If it should prove embarrassing for those clients to have their names made public, then the voters naturally wonder why.

The burden of setting up rules to prevent this sort of doubt and confusion rests with the ethics committee and the Senate, itself. But it is up to Senator Long to give full details to the people who have elected him their representative. He hasn't done that yet - Kansas City Times

BOSS, YOU CAN FIRE ME FOR SAYING THIS

While the FCC is berating television for its cigarette commercials, we wish it would look into another aspect of tv ads aimed not at corrupting the youth but at demoralizing the adult. In tv commercials, nothing good happens to anyone past the age of discretion. Life not only doesn't begin at 40, it ends at 25.

Watch the people in these ads for a while. Teenagers invariably have great, glistening teeth. Adults have dentures and denture breath. Boys switch hair grease and girls are glad. Men don't have hair. If they do, it is full of dandruff. Boys douse themselves with shaving lotion and wait to beat off the women, like traps full of cheese. Older men are happy to find something that drains all eight sinuses.

Young people have fun. Older people have nagging headaches. Young people spend all night wolfing hamburgers at amusement parks or beach parties. Older people go to a nearby movie and have to leave because their stummick is killing them. Girls have yards of blonde hair full of body and boys nuzzle it. Wives have gray hair and their husbands won't take them dancing. Men work hard and get ahead, only to have some pimply assistant tell them they have bad breath. The teen-age wife makes a cup of coffee and turns her husband into a sex maniac. The older wife washes, irons, mops floors and puts up with birds on the sink, and her husband comes home with a miserable headache and takes it out on her. Girls are always washing their hair. Wives are always washing dishes.

Teen-agers wear sneakers and sandals. Adults wear support hose. Teen-agers rub each other with suntan oil. Adults rub each other with liniment. Teen-agers spend a lot of time in boats, sports cars and swimming pools. Adults spend their time in doctors' offices and listening to tedious insurance peddlers. Young people romp through fields and sniff flowers. Adults get hay fever and sneeze. Young people are always at the end of a glorious evening. Adults are always at the end of their rope.

Life is fun, fun, fun for the young. They can laugh even with their mouths full of hair. About the only happy time for an adult is when he has an accident and the insurance company pays off. It isn't fair. Worse, we have a feeling that it's all too true - Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal

If such a man had saved a sum equal to his tax, and got 3-1/2% interest, he would accumulate more than $32,000 by retirement date. IN THE WRONG PLACES

In the past year or two, news dispatches have reported Soviet experiments with the much-reviled profit system as a means of spurring lagging production in various field. And it certainly seems that these are sorely needed - if the economic ambitions of the bosses in the Kremlin are to be realized to any substantial degree.

For instance, not so long ago we were told of vastly ambitious Soviet plans to increase electric power output. And fears were expressed in our own country that Russia might overtake us in this vital sphere. But now the UPI says, in a news dispatch from London, that "A growing shortage of power is reported to have started hitting European Russia's economy, which still provides the backbone of Soviet industry." And the trouble seems to be that the Soviet bureaucracy and its managers, being unconcerned with profits or public demand, have been building power plants in the wrong places. The dispatch continues: "Soviet planners have made considerable efforts to develop power in Siberia and to attract industry there. But emigration to those parts has been disappointing. Consumer demand is low and there is a shortage of manpower, with big power stations built up in the area partly idle."

The fact is that his country is far ahead of the Soviets in power output and that the lead increases. Credit that, like so many other of our economic achievements, to a system which recognizes the need for fair profits and is solidly based on the encouragement of private enterprise.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The question "Can America feed the world?" was debated recently before the International Platform Association by Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman; Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., former chairman of the food for peace committee; and Sen. Joe Clark, D-Pa., whose recent disclosures of Negro starvation in Mississippi have startled the nation.

Said Clark: "In many a country in Appalachia, children and their parents will go to bed hungry tonight. . . two thousand years ago the philosopher Seneca said, 'A hungry people listens not to reason, or cares for justice, or is bent by any prayers.' "

Said Sen. McGovern: "The hungry that lurks in the jungles of Vietnam is a greater danger than the guerrillas lurking there. . . we've accomplished more with wheat and dried milk than all the military hardware we've sent abroad."

Said Secretary Freeman: "The record will show that in the past six and one - half years this administration has made more food available to hungry people than all the previous administrations combined.

"The United States has never fought a more important war. An estimated two billion of the world's people are hungry or malnourished. Regardless of population control measures, there will be another billion mouths to feed by 1980."

CATASTROPHE INEVITABLE?

Secretary Freeman was reasonably optimistic about the chance of feeding the world in the future. Sen. McGovern was not.

"Dr. Thomas Malthus wrote a book which alarmed the world and which is still a best seller in which he said: 'Mankind's capacity to reproduce is greater than mankind's capacity to feed himself."

"Malthus," continued Sen. McGovern, "did not perceive the technical advances of agriculture which have postponed the day of reckoning. Nevertheless that day is approaching."

It is the technical advances of agriculture which Secretary Freeman is gambling on to help feed the world. He knows that they have been amazing. In fact the advances have been so great in this country that he personally and other secretaries of agriculture before him have been embarrassed by a surplus, not a scarcity. But in the future the embarrassment may be the other way around.

Commenting on the American agricultural revolution, Silviu Brucan, former Romanian minister to the United States, once told me: "We are not much interested in American industrial machinery. The Germans, French and the Japanese have newer machinery than you. But we are interested in your farm machinery. You have produced the most revolutionary methods of farming in the world. It is your greatest contribution. But you haven't promoted it around the world."

Today some American companies are doing exactly this.

U.S. INGENUITY

The new Holland farm machinery company, developed in a small town in Pennsylvania named "New Holland," is branching out with factories in England, Australia, France and Belgium. It has adapted special combines for harvesting rice in the Philippines and southeast Asia and special balers to handle the short straw that is grown in Greece. For more humid climates, especially in the United States, New Holland has developed the "Haybine," a machine which cuts hay and presses the moisture out of it at the same time for a "crimp" so that hay does not have to lie in the sun as long as it did in the past. To some extent New Holland has outmoded the Olf Farm motto, "make hay while the sun shines."

"The world is sitting on a population time bomb with the fuse burning fast," says George C. Delp, New Holland president. "We are doing our best to prevent a global food catastrophe."

New Holland has also developed an amazing machine to pick up a crop which has fallen down in the field, chop it into small pieces and blow it into a wagon.

Another firm contributing to the agricultural revolution is the Cobey Wagon Company of Galion, Ohio, which has come a century from the old days of the luberring farm wagon to modern automatic wagons which will unload three or four tons of corn or chopped ensilage in a few minutes.

The Chore Boy Company of Cambridge City, Ind., on the other hand, has adopted a unique dairying idea from New Zealand, the Herringbone Milking Parlor, in which cows stand at an angle like the bones of a herring, to be milked. Chore boy's motto is, "Don't stoop to teats," which means the cows walk in on an elevated platform and the dairyman stands upright at a lower level to attach the automatic milkers.

The American farmer, thanks to the ingenuity of American farm machinery companies, is producing the biggest crops in history. Secretary Freeman believes the time has come for the American farm revolution to be spread abroad just as New Holland is adapting it to Phillipine rice and Greek hay.

RIOT INSURANCE

Insurance men are concerned about how far to carry their interpretations of the niceties of language in policies that cover riot - damaged stores and home in cities across the nation.

After the Watts riots, insurance companies generally paid claims -- in part because Watts rioting was considered an isolated incident.

Now, however, they're seriously considering taking advantage in paying cases of "insurrection."

An Editor's Outlook

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones

NO WAY TO JUBILO

IF THERE is much more use of raw "black power" in American cities there will arise the counter- force of raw "white power." And in any brutal test of strength, white power is going to win.

Any condition of racial warfare in America will be disastrous to a minority representing about 12 per cent of the total population. It will be in less degree disastrous to the majority, too, for no racial group can possibly gain if it wins a war but loses the last vestiges of tolerance and humanity.

YET THE so-called "militant" Negro leadership, represented by Stokely Carmichael, Floyd McKissick, Leroi Jones, Cassius Clay and other odd and hysterical characters, is hell - bent for war. It has claimed "the right of black people to revolt when they deem it necessary and in their interest."

This, presumably, would also give white people the right to "revolt," i.e., take the law into their own hands, when they deem it necessary, and down that road mass murder lies. No wonder Prof. Kenneth Clark, a leading Negro psychologist, has seen in the Negro lootings a "suicidal element."

RECURRENT IN the interviews with Negroes who have stripped liquor stores, supermarkets and appliance shops was the defiant assurance that "this will wake Whitey up." It may do that, but not with the results hoped for.

The "black power" insistence that Negroes should seize political control wherever they are in a majority could result, not in ghetto neighborhoods, but in all - black cities. If such cities choked on their social problems and could not sell their municipal bonds the results would be sad. And cities with substantial white majorities might use various, even brutal means, to discourage further Negro immigration.

THE INSANITY of the "black power" philosophy has had three other manifestations:

1-- An assault on the Negro's traditional friends. White "liberals" who spearheaded and supported the original integration movement are now rejected and hooted at. Jewish organizations, which had long backed Negro aspirations, are alarmed at the anti - Semitism expressed by Negro rioters.

2--The movement to popularize bankruptcy applications among Negroes. It is advertised that for a few dollars a Negro may divest himself of any obligation to pay his debts. What isn't added is that while debt-shirking may hurt the white proprietors it will utterly ruin Negro proprietors and undermine what Negroes need most, a growing middle class. No people ever found greater acceptance or prosperity by destroying their credit ratings.

3--The edge of treason. Since the early '20s the Communist Party has been trying to alienate Negroes from the rest of America. The bitter complaints of discrimination coming from African students at Russian universities hardly show either Russians or the Red hierarchy to be sentimental about Negroes. But the creation of a violent, disloyal minority in America, culminating in the horror of civil war, is devoutly to be wished by the Communist powers. The Reds are prepared to "support" black power until the last American Negro is dead, for the result will be a weakened America, stained with blood before the world.

IT IS no longer enough to say that these self - destructive policies are not concurred in by the majority of American Negroes. The fact is that dozens of American cities now live under the threat of riot and murder. Nor does it do to say that peace must await an outpouring of $50 billion to "eliminate slums." There is a point up to which increasing protests will generate increased efforts to satisfy them. But beyond that point there is a hardening. The majority of Americans will not enact a Negro - relief program at the point of a pistol.

THIS IS the hour when intelligent and responsible Negroes must step forward and make themselves heard, or forever stand guilty of deserting their people in a moment of crisis. Too often they have been silenced by cries of "Uncle Tom." Too often they have washed their hands of the ghettos and fled to the suburbs, themselves. The few brave and forthright souls like Negro publisher George Schuyler haven't had enough company.

Needed: A new Negro organization dedicated to the principle that the uplift of a minority can be achieved only under the protection of law, the selling point of self - improvement, and the force of votes, reason and peaceful protest. America's most able Negroes are simply going to have to tell their people that they can't shoot and loot their way in the Land of Jubilo.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

REUTHER'S SECRET POLLS

Members -- Mostly the Young -- Reported Ready To Strike for More Money and Early Retirement.

Detroit: -- Walter Reuther and his embattled colleagues may well be able to lend the bulk of their $65 million strike fund to this city's poor - especially those evicted from their homes by arsonists' flames. The auto union, it seems, will have little need for its huge war chest now that those flames have burned up Reuther's strategy as well as sections of the car - making metropolis.

Insiders believe it inconceivable that the United Auto Workers (UAW) will strike one or all of the Big Three corporations on Sept. 6, contract expiration date, and thus inflict disaster upon disaster. The day after Labor Day will be too soon to shut the big factories and throw among others, 100,000 Negro workers onto the still scorched streets.

Pressures from the White House on both sides will be awesome. So the rust-haired leader is expected to pull a cliff - hanger and call everybody back for the next chapter in the serial. There will be an armistice, but not for too long. Sometime in the early fall -- after the cool of the long hot summer -- Reuther will make a stand on two issues:

The auto union will fight for a "heavy wage increase" and for "a new system of earlier retirement and pensions at higher rates."

There have been a series of polls, some by the union's regional officials and one by a professional New York opinion sampler, which show that the United Auto Workers' rank and file want the physical comforts which more money can buy and the psychological comfort of guaranteed retirement security. The professional poll was taken in the past 60 days. In effect, it asked the membership which were the issues worth striking for and for how long. Even those under 30 went for the retirement demand.

The public will hear much of the famous Reuther rhetoric about guaranteed incomes and a switch to the system of permanent salaries for blue as well as white collar workers. But those speeches will be the curtain raisers to Hamlet - like soliloquies.

For the moment the auto union rank and file is not getting emotional over the guaranteed annual wage. They've practically got it. The terror is out of the job. In the old days, layoffs during tooling up for new models were the time for worry and saving of breadcrusts in the auto cities. But now the layoffs have a ball. They get Special Unemployment Benefits, unemployment insurance, and vacation pay. This gives them all but a few dollars of their regular take - home pay. And a big chunk of the summer off. They look forward to it, the young workers do. What was once a catastrophe becomes a grand holiday.

Furthermore, during the rest of the year there are similar income guarantees so that it would take only a few cents more for the companies to hike their production workers' guaranteed income. Insiders say this will be no problem.

The poll's the thing. Those reports now on Reuther's desk disclose that his people want that earlier retirement. They still seek more relief time and longer lunch periods. But basically they want to get away from the mills and assembly lines -- permanently and younger.

So, Reuther and his fantastically computer - minded technicians even are talking about some employes' retirement at 50 under special circumstances, wide retirement at 55 (without loss of benefits they would gain if they worked into their 60s), and bigger payments all along the line. There is a complex system called the "85 - points" rule won during the last go-round in '64. Frequently it permits auto workers to retire at up to 70 per cent of their previously earned annual income. Nor Reuther wants that heavily increased.

Nor is he ignoring any past retirees. He wants them included in any new increased pension systems -- regardless of when they retired from the auto companies hire.

So there are the fronts on which Reuther and company will fight. Those polls showed a "surprising number" of workers demanding earlier retirement and so Reuther will head the surveys. The issues will be sharpened after the conferees get out of what UAW Ford Council Director Ken Bannon calls the "nitty - gritty" stage of negotiations, during which each side probes the other's weaknesses.

They'll all be laboring over Labor Day weekend. The issues are clear -- money and a secure middle - age type of retirement for the younger multitudes to dream about.

Only Reuther's timetable still is in doubt.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Holidays generally are a time for gaiety and fun. An exception is Supplication Day, celebrated only in the Virgin Islands.

This is the day that residents of the Virgin Islands go to church and pray that their islands will not be hit by a hurricane.

Their prayers have been answered every year since 1932. Other places haven't been so lucky.

Virgin Islanders regard July 25 - Supplication Day - as the beginning of the hurricane season. Actually, hurricanes have been known to occur in every month but April. The U.S. Weather Bureau regards their main period as running from June 1 to Nov. 15, with September the most dangerous month.

A hurricane is a whirling storm measuring several hundred miles across, with winds blowing at 75 miles an hour or more. The center is a calm area, called the "eye", that measures about 20 miles across and has little wind or cloudiness. The fury of the hurricane begins at the edge of the eye - and it is fury.

Towering cloud masses produce heavy rains. The terrible winds build up killer waves; waves that even the strongest ship would be lucky to survive. Just 10 years ago Germany proclaimed a state of national mourning when a training ship, full of merchant marine cadets, was hit by a hurricane and went down with 80 men and boys - virtually her entire crew.

Hurricane winds usually are not more than 100 miles an hour, but sometimes they may blow up to almost 200 miles an hour.

These terrible winds also drive the water before them, so that a "storm tide" rises along a shore line as a hurricane approaches. If the storm tide comes at the same time as the normal high tide, the water may rise several feet. The storm tide of a hurricane at Galveston, Texas, in 1900, drowned 6,000 persons. The water rose four feet in a few seconds.

There is one additional danger. As a hurricane moves over land, it may continue to cause heavy rains even after the winds fall below hurricane force. These rains may cause floods - killer floods. One of the floods in Connecticut in 1955 was caused by Hurricane Diane. Combined with another flood which occurred later in 1955, almost 120 people were killed.

Meteorologists of the U.S. Weather Bureau's Hurricane Warning Service carefully watch the weather reports from the Atlantic and Caribbean, and pictures of cloud systems taken by weather satellites. When they believe a new hurricane has been born, they send out planes to locate it and estimate its strength and direction.

Hour after hours, day and night, the storm's progress is checked, and warnings are issued to areas in its path.

If you should hear such warnings, take heed. Anyone who has lived through a hurricane never forgets it. Too many people have been hit by a hurricane and failed to live.

We would guess that the ethics committee will want to continue its preliminary research out of fairness to both the Senate and to Senator Long. We are certain that the voters of Missouri want to know more about those fees.

The senator really did not shed light on that matter. He said that none of the cases involved a conflict of interest and that the names of the clients could not be disclosed.

Perhaps this will be enough for the Senate, but we doubt whether it will be enough for the voters, who are entitled to information beyond generalities. It is true that the Senate does not require disclosure and that the ethics committee has yet to establish clear lines of conduct.

But if there is a lawyer-client relationship there also is a senator-constituent relationship. If it should prove embarrassing for those clients to have their names made public, then the voters naturally wonder why.

The burden of setting up rules to prevent this sort of doubt and confusion rests with the ethics committee and the Senate, itself. But it is up to Senator Long to give full details to the people who have elected him their representative. He hasn't done that yet - Kansas City Times

BOSS, YOU CAN FIRE ME FOR SAYING THIS

While the FCC is berating television for its cigarette commercials, we wish it would look into another aspect of tv ads aimed not at corrupting the youth but at demoralizing the adult. In tv commercials, nothing good happens to anyone past the age of discretion. Life not only doesn't begin at 40, it ends at 25.

Watch the people in these ads for a while. Teenagers invariably have great, glistening teeth. Adults have dentures and denture breath. Boys switch hair grease and girls are glad. Men don't have hair. If they do, it is full of dandruff. Boys douse themselves with shaving lotion and wait to beat off the women, like traps full of cheese. Older men are happy to find something that drains all eight sinuses.

Young people have fun. Older people have nagging headaches. Young people spend all night wolfing hamburgers at amusement parks or beach parties. Older people go to a nearby movie and have to leave because their stummick is killing them. Girls have yards of blonde hair full of body and boys nuzzle it. Wives have gray hair and their husbands won't take them dancing. Men work hard and get ahead, only to have some pimply assistant tell them they have bad breath. The teen-age wife makes a cup of coffee and turns her husband into a sex maniac. The older wife washes, irons, mops floors and puts up with birds on the sink, and her husband comes home with a miserable headache and takes it out on her. Girls are always washing their hair. Wives are always washing dishes.

Teen-agers wear sneakers and sandals. Adults wear support hose. Teen-agers rub each other with suntan oil. Adults rub each other with liniment. Teen-agers spend a lot of time in boats, sports cars and swimming pools. Adults spend their time in doctors' offices and listening to tedious insurance peddlers. Young people romp through fields and sniff flowers. Adults get hay fever and sneeze. Young people are always at the end of a glorious evening. Adults are always at the end of their rope.

Life is fun, fun, fun for the young. They can laugh even with their mouths full of hair. About the only happy time for an adult is when he has an accident and the insurance company pays off. It isn't fair. Worse, we have a feeling that it's all too true - Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal

By the time the 21-year-old who goes to work today (1967) retires at 65 in 2011, the value of the old-age taxes he will have paid during his working life (including interest lost) will exceed by more than $12,000 the benefits he will draw in retirement, says Tax Foundation's new study: Economic Aspects of the Social Security Tax. If such a man had saved a sum equal to his tax, and got 3-1/2% interest, he would accumulate more than $32,000 by retirement date. On the same day the value of the social security payments he would get (assuming normal life expectancy) would amount to about $19,000.

IN THE WRONG PLACES

In the past year or two, news dispatches have reported Soviet experiments with the much-reviled profit system as a means of spurring lagging production in various field. And it certainly seems that these are sorely needed - if the economic ambitions of the bosses in the Kremlin are to be realized to any substantial degree.

For instance, not so long ago we were told of vastly ambitious Soviet plans to increase electric power output. And fears were expressed in our own country that Russia might overtake us in this vital sphere. But now the UPI says, in a news dispatch from London, that "A growing shortage of power is reported to have started hitting European Russia's economy, which still provides the backbone of Soviet industry." And the trouble seems to be that the Soviet bureaucracy and its managers, being unconcerned with profits or public demand, have been building power plants in the wrong places. The dispatch continues: "Soviet planners have made considerable efforts to develop power in Siberia and to attract industry there. But emigration to those parts has been disappointing. Consumer demand is low and there is a shortage of manpower, with big power stations built up in the area partly idle."

The fact is that his country is far ahead of the Soviets in power output and that the lead increases. Credit that, like so many other of our economic achievements, to a system which recognizes the need for fair profits and is solidly based on the encouragement of private enterprise.

Andrew Carnegie pointed out a long time ago that no businessman needs to look outside his own factory for good investments. Many of us withdraw money needed in our own underfed enterprises and place it in tempting speculations and investments outside offering perhaps 7 or 8 per cent. Yet enterprises invest in cost-reducing devices.

As individuals and employes we are equally blind to the unexploited equities within ourselves. Books and magazines that contain valuable information can be purchased at trifling sums.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The question "Can America feed the world?" was debated recently before the International Platform Association by Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman; Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., former chairman of the food for peace committee; and Sen. Joe Clark, D-Pa., whose recent disclosures of Negro starvation in Mississippi have startled the nation.

Said Clark: "In many a country in Appalachia, children and their parents will go to bed hungry tonight. . . two thousand years ago the philosopher Seneca said, 'A hungry people listens not to reason, or cares for justice, or is bent by any prayers.' "

Said Sen. McGovern: "The hungry that lurks in the jungles of Vietnam is a greater danger than the guerrillas lurking there. . . we've accomplished more with wheat and dried milk than all the military hardware we've sent abroad."

Said Secretary Freeman: "The record will show that in the past six and one - half years this administration has made more food available to hungry people than all the previous administrations combined.

"The United States has never fought a more important war. An estimated two billion of the world's people are hungry or malnourished. Regardless of population control measures, there will be another billion mouths to feed by 1980."

CATASTROPHE INEVITABLE?

Secretary Freeman was reasonably optimistic about the chance of feeding the world in the future. Sen. McGovern was not.

"Dr. Thomas Malthus wrote a book which alarmed the world and which is still a best seller in which he said: 'Mankind's capacity to reproduce is greater than mankind's capacity to feed himself.'

"Malthus," continued Sen. McGovern, "did not perceive the technical advances of agriculture which have postponed the day of reckoning. Nevertheless that day is approaching."

It is the technical advances of agriculture which Secretary Freeman is gambling on to help feed the world. He knows that they have been amazing. In fact the advances have been so great in this country that he personally and other secretaries of agriculture before him have been embarrassed by a surplus, not a scarcity. But in the future the embarrassment may be the other way around.

Commenting on the American agricultural revolution, Silviu Brucan, former Romanian minister to the United States, once told me: "We are not much interested in American industrial machinery. The Germans, French and the Japanese have newer machinery than you. But we are interested in your farm machinery. You have produced the most revolutionary methods of farming in the world. It is your greatest contribution. But you haven't promoted it around the world."

Today some American companies are doing exactly this.

U.S. INGENUITY

The new Holland farm machinery company, developed in a small town in Pennsylvania named "New Holland," is branching out with factories in England, Australia, France and Belgium. It has adapted special combines for harvesting rice in the Philippines and southeast Asia and special balers to handle the short straw that is grown in Greece. For more humid climates, especially in the United States, New Holland has developed the "Haybine," a machine which cuts hay and presses the moisture out of it at the same time for a "crimp" so that hay does not have to lie in the sun as long as it did in the past. To some extent New Holland has outmoded the Olf Farm motto, "make hay while the sun shines."

"The world is sitting on a population time bomb with the fuse burning fast," says George C. Delp, New Holland president. "We are doing our best to prevent a global food catastrophe."

New Holland has also developed an amazing machine to pick up a crop which has fallen down in the field, chop it into small pieces and blow it into a wagon.

Another firm contributing to the agricultural revolution is the Cobey Wagon Company of Galion, Ohio, which has come a century from the old days of the lubering farm wagon to modern automatic wagons which will unload three or four tons of corn or chopped ensilage in a few minutes.

The Chore Boy Company of Cambridge City, Ind., on the other hand, has adopted a unique dairying idea from New Zealand, the Herringbone Milking Parlor, in which cows stand at an angle like the bones of a herring, to be milked. Chore boy's motto is, "Don't stoop to teats," which means the cows walk in on an elevated platform and the dairyman stands upright at a lower level to attach the automatic milkers.

The American farmer, thanks to the ingenuity of American farm machinery companies, is producing the biggest crops in history. Secretary Freeman believes the time has come for the American farm revolution to be spread abroad just as New Holland is adapting it to Philippine rice and Greek hay.

RIOT INSURANCE

Insurance men are concerned about how far to carry their interpretations of the niceties of language in policies that cover riot - damaged stores and home in cities across the nation.

After the Watts riots, insurance companies generally paid claims -- in part because Watts rioting was considered an isolated incident.

Now, however, they're seriously considering taking advantage in paying cases of "insurrection."

An Editor's Outlook

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones

NO WAY TO JUBILO

IF THERE is much more use of raw "black power" in American cities there will arise the counter- force of raw "white power." And in any brutal test of strength, white power is going to win.

Any condition of racial warfare in America will be disastrous to a minority representing about 12 per cent of the total population. It will be in less degree disastrous to the majority, too, for no racial group can possibly gain if it wins a war but loses the last vestiges of tolerance and humanity.

YET THE so-called "militant" Negro leadership, represented by Stokely Carmichael, Floyd McKissick, Leroi Jones, Cassius Clay and other odd and hysterical characters, is hell - bent for war. It has claimed "the right of black people to revolt when they deem it necessary and in their interest."

This, presumably, would also give white people the right to "revolt," i.e., take the law into their own hands, when they deem it necessary, and down that road mass murder lies. No wonder Prof. Kenneth Clark, a leading Negro psychologist, has seen in the Negro lootings a "suicidal element."

RECURRENT IN the interviews with Negroes who have stripped liquor stores, supermarkets and appliance shops was the defiant assurance that "this will wake Whitey up." It may do that, but not with the results hoped for.

The "black power" insistence that Negroes should seize political control wherever they are in a majority could result, not in ghetto neighborhoods, but in all - black cities. If such cities choked on their social problems and could not sell their municipal bonds the results would be sad. And cities with substantial white majorities might use various, even brutal means, to discourage further Negro immigration.

THE INSANITY of the "black power" philosophy has had three other manifestations:

1-- An assault on the Negro's traditional friends. White "liberals" who spearheaded and supported the original integration movement are now rejected and hooted at. Jewish organizations, which had long backed Negro aspirations, are alarmed at the anti - Semitism expressed by Negro rioters.

2--The movement to popularize bankruptcy applications among Negroes. It is advertised that for a few dollars a Negro may divest himself of any obligation to pay his debts. What isn't added is that while debt-shirking may hurt the white proprietors it will utterly ruin Negro proprietors and undermine what Negroes need most, a growing middle class. No people ever found greater acceptance or prosperity by destroying their credit ratings.

3--The edge of treason. Since the early '20s the Communist Party has been trying to alienate Negroes from the rest of America. The bitter complaints of discrimination coming from African students at Russian universities hardly show either Russians or the Red hierarchy to be sentimental about Negroes. But the creation of a violent, disloyal minority in America, culminating in the horror of civil war, is devoutly to be wished by the Communist powers. The Reds are prepared to "support" black power until the last American Negro is dead, for the result will be a weakened America, stained with blood before the world.

IT IS no longer enough to say that these self-destructive policies are not concurred in by the majority of American Negroes. The fact is that dozens of American cities now live under the threat of riot and murder.

Nor does it do to say that peace must await an outpouring of $50 billion to "eliminate slums." There is a point up to which increasing protests will generate increased efforts to satisfy them. But beyond that point there is a hardening. The majority of Americans will not enact a Negro - relief program at the point of a pistol.

THIS IS the hour when intelligent and responsible Negroes must step forward and make themselves heard, or forever stand guilty of deserting their people in a moment of crisis. Too often they have been silenced by cries of "Uncle Tom." Too often they have washed their hands of the ghettos and fled to the suburbs, themselves. The few brave and forthright souls like Negro publisher George Schuyler haven't had enough company.

Needed: A new Negro organization dedicated to the principle that the uplift of a minority can be achieved only under the protection of law, the selling point of self - improvement, and the force of votes, reason and peaceful protest. America's most able Negroes are simply going to have to tell their people that they can't shoot and loot their way in the Land of Jubilo.

Inside Labor

REUTHER'S SECRET POLLS

Members -- Mostly the Young -- Reported Ready To Strike for More Money and Early Retirement.

Detroit: -- Walter Reuther and his embattled colleagues may well be able to lend the bulk of their $65 million strike fund to this city's poor - especially those evicted from their homes by arsonists' flames. The auto union, it seems, will have little need for its huge war chest now that those flames have burned up Reuther's strategy as well as sections of the car - making metropolis.

Insiders believe it inconceivable that the United Auto Workers (UAW) will strike one or all of the Big Three corporations on Sept. 6, contract expiration date, and thus inflict disaster upon disaster. The day after Labor Day will be too soon to shut the big factories and throw among others, 100,000 Negro workers onto the still scorched streets.

Pressures from the White House on both sides will be awesome. So the rust-haired leader is expected to pull a cliff - hanger and call everybody back for the next chapter in the serial. There will be an armistice, but not for too long. Sometime in the early fall -- after the cool of the long hot summer -- Reuther will make a stand on two issues:

The auto union will fight for a "heavy wage increase" and for "a new system of earlier retirement and pensions at higher rates."

There have been a series of polls, some by the union's regional officials and one by a professional New York opinion sampler, which show that the United Auto Workers' rank and file want the physical comforts which more money can buy and the psychological comfort of guaranteed retirement security. The professional poll was taken in the past 60 days. In effect, it asked the membership which were the issues worth striking for and for how long. Even those under 30 went for the retirement demand.

The public will hear much of the famous Reuther rhetoric about guaranteed incomes and a switch to the system of permanent salaries for blue as well as white collar workers. But those speeches will be the curtain raisers to Hamlet - like soliloquies.

For the moment the auto union rank and file is not getting emotional over the guaranteed annual wage. They've practically got it. The terror is out of the job. In the old days, layoffs during tooling up for new models were the time for worry and saving of breadcrusts in the auto cities. But now the layoffs have a ball. They get Special Unemployment Benefits, unemployment insurance, and vacation pay. This gives them all but a few dollars of their regular take - home pay. And a big chunk of the summer off. They look forward to it, the young workers do. What was once a catastrophe becomes a grand holiday.

Furthermore, during the rest of the year there are similar income guarantees so that it would take only a few cents more for the companies to hike their production workers' guaranteed income. Insiders say this will be no problem.

The poll's the thing. Those reports now on Reuther's desk disclose that his people want that earlier retirement. They still seek more relief time and longer lunch periods. But basically they want to get away from the mills and assembly lines -- permanently and younger.

So, Reuther and his fantastically computer - minded technicians even are talking about some employes' retirement at 50 under special circumstances, wide retirement at 55 (without loss of benefits they would gain if they worked into their 60s), and bigger payments all along the line. There is a complex system called the "85 - points" rule won during the last go-round in '64. Frequently it permits auto workers to retire at up to 70 per cent of their previously earned annual income. Nor Reuther wants that heavily increased.

Nor is he ignoring any past retirees. He wants them included in any new increased pension systems -- regardless of when they retired from the auto companies hire.

So there are the fronts on which Reuther and company will fight. Those polls showed a "surprising number" of workers demanding earlier retirement and so Reuther will head the surveys. The issues will be sharpened after the conferees get out of what UAW Ford Council Director Ken Bannon calls the "nitty - gritty" stage of negotiations, during which each side probes the other's weaknesses.

They'll all be laboring over Labor Day weekend. The issues are clear -- money and a secure middle - age type of retirement for the younger multitudes to dream about.

Only Reuther's timetable still is in doubt.

Favorite Interview With Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower

By Barbara Walters
For Cynthia Lowry

Editor's Note: Next month Barbara Walters will have been appearing on NBC's Today show for three years, longer than any other woman in the show's 15-year history. Here she tells how she feels about the job and answers the two questions she's asked most: When does she get up, and what was her favorite interview? --

NEW YORK AP - When I was first promoted from a behind-the-camera writer on the show to an in - front - of - the - camera broadcaster, I used to say that I loved the job so much that I would do it for nothing.

I still feel that way except that my business manager has advised me that it is foolhardy, to say that publicly, especially as my contract is up for renegotiation.

But I cannot underestimate the pleasures of my job, of working daily with Hugh Downs, whom I could not possibly like or respect more, of travelling all over the world, of meeting the most creative and influential people of our time.

I arise every weekday at 4:40 a.m. I have not gotten used to the hours, but I have never overslept. I dress in the dark in clothes I have laid out the night before so as not to awaken my husband. I am at the studio by 5:30 to have my hair set, my face made up and to rehearse commercials. The rest of the program is unrehearsed.

I'm often asked which interview I enjoyed most.

It is very hard to pick one from the list of prominent people who have appeared on "Today," but I think Mamie Eisenhower might be pretty close to the top of my list. Perhaps because I could not remember anyone having interviewed her before, and I had heard that she was shy of reporters.

Instead, interviewing General Eisenhower and her at Gettysburg on their 50th wedding anniversary, I found her to be not only warm and witty but above all considerate.

It was a tortuously hot summer day and I was the only female reporter present. Mrs. Eisenhower spotted me immediately and invited me inside the cool house for iced tea and a long chat.

Nor did she neglect the male reporters. Out to them, talking with the general, went ice cold soft drinks.

I have often felt that if there had been a female television reporter in Washington during President Eisenhower's terms of office, we would all have known Mamie Eisenhower much better.

Tomatoes Rich in Vitamins

By Mrs. Mattie E. Aslin
Extension Home Economist

KENNETT -- Tomatoes like peaches and other fruits are fine textured and the meat of the vegetable is rich in vitamins and minterals. Since tomatoes are high in water content, a boiling water bath (212 degrees F.) for processing tomatoes will result in a firm product. Presurring tomatoes or other fruits is not recommended as the high temperature deteriorates their texture. Forty-five minutes time for pints and 55 minutes for quart jars in the water-bath is sufficient. Take the jars out of the water when the time is up as the product will still cook if left in the hot water.

Using only the perfect ripe tomatoes will help insure a well kept jar. To loosen skins, dip into boiling water for about 1/2 minute; then dip quickly into cold water, cut out stem ends and peel tomatoes.

Pack tomatoes to 1/2 inch of top of jar pressing gently to fill spaces. Add no water if liquid is needed, use tomato juice if you do plan to pack.

We have increased our per person consumption of tomato juice and other canned tomato products. We now eat about the same amount of canned tomatoes per person as 30 years ago, but somewhat more canned tomato juice than formerly. We eat on the average about twice as many tomatoes fresh as we eat canned. In the consumption of canned tomato products, tomato juice and vegetable juices which contain 70 per cent or more tomato rank first. When we include canned tomatoes, our yearly consumption per person has been greater than that of any other canned vegetable.

Tomatoes are low in calories, rich in Vitamin C and a good source of Vitamin A. One medium sized tomato, raw, provides almost half of the Vitamin C for the day plus about one-third of the Vitamin A. Field ripened tomatoes are higher in Vitamin C than fall and winter greenhouse tomatoes. Tomatoes retain a good share of their vitamins when canned or cooked though fresh tomatoes are higher in nutritive value.

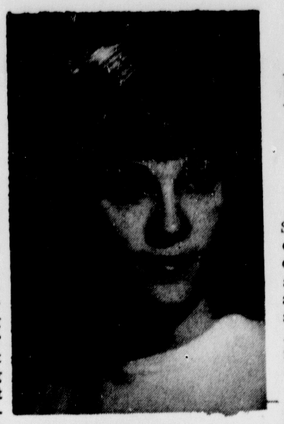

Fresh tomatoes with a slightly greenish cast will ripen in a day or two at room temperature. Ripe tomatoes should be kept in the refrigerator and used soon. Green tomatoes will ripen satisfactorily if kept in a dry place, light or dark, at a temperature of from 55 degrees to 70 degrees F.

To help preserve the original flavor, color and vitamin content, keep canned tomatoes in a cool place until you open the cans. You can keep the tomatoes covered in the open tin or in another container in the refrigerator for several days.

During peak canning periods for tomato items, wholesalers and retail stores must clear space for incoming stock. You can take advantage of such a sale to restock your shelves. Other special sales may be due to a large carry over stock. No matter what the special price you are getting the same quality of the same brand as you do at regular prices.

Jane Fonda in Bed After Bird Scene

ROME, (AP) — After a week of working nearly nude in a high wind with 2,000 birds actress Jane Fonda wound up in bed today running a temperature.

Doctors didn't know whether it was a virus she might have caught from the birds. They prescribed medicine and ordered her to rest.

Her encounter with the birds was for a scene in the picture "Barbarella" she is doing in Rome under the direction of her husband, Roger Vadim.

The scene calls for a swarm of wrens in a huge cage to rip her clothes off with their bills.

Catholic Priest, Former Convent Superior Marry

MIDLAND, Mich. AP -- A Roman Catholic priest and the former superior of a Catholic convent have wed in an Episcopal church.

The Rev. Frank E. Dewitt, 36, until recently assistant pastor at St. Brigid's church in Midland, exchanged vows Friday night with Marilyn Corby, 34-year-old former superior of nearby St. Brigid's convent.

The simply ceremony was performed in St. John's Episcopal Church by the Rev. William O. Swan, assistant pastor. "It was just like any other marriage ceremony," said the Rev. Mr. Swan.

There was no comment from Catholic offiicials.

He said the newlyweds could not get permission to marry within their own communion.

Catholic canon law forbids the clergy to marry except in very unusual circumstances.

The Rev. Mr. Swan said he held the usual permarriage conferences with the couple with the only different that these included "a discussion about the unusual marriage."

Shortly before the ceremony, attended only by the families of Dewitt and his wife, the couple issued a statement.

"The exercise of the right to marry is within the realm of personal choice, rather than institutional choice," they said.

"We hold the right for a priest to marry in accordance with Paul."

In his first letter to the Corinthians, St. Paul wrote, "Do we not have the right to be accompanied by a wife as the other apostles and brothers of the Lord and Cephas?"

"Furthermore," wrote the couple, "a priest may normally pursue the right to marriage in accordance with the statement of Pope John XXIII - 'He who has right has also the duty demanding those marks of his dignity.' "

The couple said they interpret the late Pope's comment to mean "that it is unjust that the love between a man and a woman leading to the stable union of marriage should be a cause for a priest being unable to exercise his ministry."

The Rev. Mr. Swan said both Dewitt and his wife intend to remain Catholics.

Both Dewitt and his wife had resigned their positions at St. Brigid's and were planning to take up teaching positions in another town, the Rev. Mr. Swan said.

"I'm not a liberty to say which town, or even which state," he said.

Favorite Interview With Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower

By Barbara Walters
For Cynthia Lowry

Editor's Note: Next month Barbara Walters will have been appearing on NBC's Today show for three years, longer than any other woman in the show's 15-year history. Here she tells how she feels about the job and answers the two questions she's asked most: When does she get up, and what was her favorite interview? --

NEW YORK AP - When I was first promoted from a behind-the-camera writer on the show to an in-front-of-the-camera broadcaster, I used to say that I loved the job so much that I would do it for nothing.

I still feel that way except that my business manager has advised me that it is foolhardy, to say that publicly, especially as my contract is up for renegotiation.

But I cannot underestimate the pleasures of my job, of working daily with Hugh Downs, whom I could not possibly like or respect more, of travelling all over the world, of meeting the most creative and influential people of our time.

I arise every weekday at 4:40 a.m. I have not gotten used to the hours, but I have never overslept. I dress in the dark in clothes I have laid out the night before so as not to awaken my husband. I am at the studio by 5:30 to have my hair set, my face made up and to rehearse commercials. The rest of the program is unrehearsed.

I'm often asked which interview I enjoyed most.

It is very hard to pick one from the list of prominent people who have appeared on "Today," but I think Mamie Eisenhower might be pretty close to the top of my list. Perhaps because I could not remember anyone having interviewed her before, and I had heard that she was shy of reporters.

Instead, interviewing General Eisenhower and her at Gettysburg on their 50th wedding anniversary, I found her to be not only warm and witty but above all considerate.

It was a tortuously hot summer day and I was the only female reporter present. Mrs. Eisenhower spotted me immediately and invited me inside the cool house for iced tea and a long chat.

Nor did she neglect the male reporters. Out to them, talking with the general, went ice cold soft drinks.

I have often felt that if there had been a female television reporter in Washington during President Eisenhower's terms of office, we would all have known Mamie Eisenhower much better.

Daughters of Isabella Plan Rummage Sale

The August business meeting of the St. Francis Xavier Daughters of Isabella was called to order by the past regent Mrs. Wilma Rodgers. Mrs. Dorothy Willis opened and closed the meeting with prayer. Thirteen members were present.

The minutes of the July meeting were read by the scribe, Mrs. Virginia Pobst, in the absence of recording secretary, Mrs. Mary Frances LeGrand.

The financial report was given by Mrs. Mary Paylor. The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. Laura Sherman. The past regent, Mrs. Rodgers, read letters from the Supreme Regent, Mrs. Anna Walsh, Cardinal Spellman and a letter from Rome.

There were 500 hours of volunteer service donated by the members. A new password was given to the members.

The committee appointed for the September Meeting is Dorothy Donner, chairman, Joyce Ernst and Beulah Leible.

The members voted to have a rummage sale at the Farmer's Market, Sept. 9. All members are to bring their rummage to the next meeting.

The members also voted to sell dishtowels. This will be discussed at the next meeting.

After the meeting adjourned, cookies and soft drinks were served by Mrs. Willis and Mrs. Sherman.

Tomatoes Rich in Vitamins

By Mrs. Mattie E. Aslin
Extension Home Economist

KENNETT -- Tomatoes like peaches and other fruits are fine textured and the meat of the vegetable is rich in vitamins and minterals. Since tomatoes are high in water content, a boiling water bath (212 degrees F.) for processing tomatoes will result in a firm product. Presurring tomatoes or other fruits is not recommended as the high temperature deteriorates their texture. Forty-five minutes time for pints and 55 minutes for quart jars in the water-bath is sufficient. Take the jars out of the water when the time is up as the product will still cook if left in the hot water.

Using only the perfect ripe tomatoes will help insure a well kept jar. To loosen skins, dip into boiling water for about 1/2 minute; then dip quickly into cold water, cut out stem ends and peel tomatoes.

Pack tomatoes to 1/2 inch of top of jar pressing gently to fill spaces. Add no water if liquid is needed, use tomato juice if you do plan to pack.

We have increased our per person consumption of tomato juice and other canned tomato products. We now eat about the same amount of canned tomatoes per person as 30 years ago, but somewhat more canned tomato juice than formerly. We eat on the average about twice as many tomatoes fresh as we eat canned. In the consumption of canned tomato products, tomato juice and vegetable juices which contain 70 per cent or more tomato rank first. When we include canned tomatoes, our yearly consumption per person has been greater than that of any other canned vegetable.

Tomatoes are low in calories, rich in Vitamin C and a good source of Vitamin A. One medium sized tomato, raw, provides almost half of the Vitamin C for the day plus about one-third of the Vitamin A. Field ripened tomatoes are higher in Vitamin C than fall and winter greenhouse tomatoes. Tomatoes retain a good share of their vitamins when canned or cooked though fresh tomatoes are higher in nutritive value.

Fresh tomatoes with a slightly greenish cast will ripen in a day or two at room temperature. Ripe tomatoes should be kept in the refrigerator and used soon. Green tomatoes will ripen satisfactorily if kept in a dry place, light or dark, at a temperature of from 55 degrees to 70 degrees F.

To help preserve the original flavor, color and vitamin content, keep canned tomatoes in a cool place until you open the cans. You can keep the tomatoes covered in the open tin or in another container in the refrigerator for several days.

During peak canning periods for tomato items, wholesalers and retail stores must clear space for incoming stock. You can take advantage of such a sale to restock your shelves. Other special sales may be due to a large carry over stock. No matter what the special price you are getting the same quality of the same brand as you do at regular prices.

CHARLESTON -- Charleston's All-Star baseball team won its own first annual Little League tournament last night by defeating Sikeston in the consolation game 4-3 and drubbing Cairo in the championship encounter, 11-4.

Sikeston won the consolation title by nudging Benton 1-0.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes presented trophies to the first three place winners, commenting on the fine play of the boys and complimenting the coaches, sponsors and umpires on their donation of time and money.

Charleston collected only two hits in the semi-final match against Sikeston. That was enough as both were homers.

Charleston's Ricky Pike blasted a solo homer in the fourth after Sikeston surged ahead 2-0 in the top of the inning and pushed a run across in the fourth after Sikeston tallied and Larry Ferrell unloaded in the bottom of the sixth with one for the victory when Charleston was trailing 3-2.

Sikeston roughed up Charleston's starting hurler for 10 hits but had no luck against reliefer Mark Chaney, who checked Sikeston threats with fine clutch pitching.

Guttenfielder led the 10-hit Sikeston attack with two singles and a double. Teammate Walker banged out a double for the only other extra base blast.

Sikeston nudged Benton in the second game with a second inning run as Benton's Wade limited Sikeston to two hits.

Ricky LaPlant was the Stars winner, clicking to the victory on a two hitter.

Sikeston's run came on back to back doubles by bill Colwick and Billy Harlow.

A nine inning second inning all but sewed up the championship for Charleston against Cairo.

Charleston had two hitters smack homers, another crack a triple and two others collected doubles in leading the nine-hit attack.

Ferrell and Chaney blasted homers while Pike connected on a triple. Ferrell collected his second extra base hit of the game with a double. Hall added a double. Chaney and Ferrell had two hits apiece to lead the Charleston attack.

Chaney notched his second victory. Brinkmeyer lost.

All four of the final teams in the tournament are entered in the 12th annual Sikeston Little League tournament which begins tomorrow afternoon at Puckett field, 18 teams are entered.

Ruth Stars Take Invitational

POPLAR BLUFF - It took Sikeston's Babe Ruth All-Stars two games in one night to win the annual Poplar Bluff Babe Ruth invitational baseball tournament and defend its title.

The Stars dumped Fredericktown 13-0 and clubbed Dexter 13-3.

The Sikeston group used the 10-run rule that puts a team in the winners circle after four and one half innings if it is leading by 10 or more runs.

Sikeston went only four innings in the first game. Dan Cartwright faced only 12 batsmen in four innings and gave up a bunt single to the 11 he faced.

Sikeston used 12 hits in the first game, including four doubles and a triple to storm past Fredericktown.

Dye, Sorrells, Ogles and Senciboy each collected a pair of hits to lead the offensive attack.

Sikeston batsmen banged out 14 safeties in the championship contest against Dexter. The Stars were led by Jim Denbow's three for four performance at the plate and Eddie Throop's six-hit pitching.

Throop missed a major league homer in the fourth, blasting a 380-foot drive that curved foul. He flied to the left fielder on his next pitch.

Jim Denbow, who batted over 600 in the tournament, was named the most valuable player and teammates Dan Cartwright, David Dollar and Throop received honorable mention.

The Stars, who lost out in the early part of the campaign to Cape Girardeau for the district Babe Ruth title have been playing their best ball since.

Sikeston will travel to Paragould, Ark., to participate in an invitational tournament. It meets Piggott at 4 p.m. Monday.

Potlatch Takes Loss

Sikeston finds itself trailing in the best of three playoff series with Pine Bluff, Ark. (1-0) for the regional baseball championship and the right to move into the Midwest regional at Lamar, Colo., next week.

The Potlatch Forest squad absorbed a 4-1 setback in its opening contest, played at VFW stadium last night and faces a do or die situation tonight in its 8 p.m. encounter with the Arkansans.

Pine Bluff broke a 1-1 deadlock with a run in the sixth and iced the victory with a pair of runs in the seventh inning.

Rudy Manley was tagged for five hits as the Arkansans, Roy Matthews checked the Foresters to three hits, including the game's only extra base blast, a triple off Richard Montgomery's bat to lead off the first. Montgomery scored on Mike Garner's sacrifice in the first for the only Forester run.

Bo Hardy led the Pine Bluff batting attack with a two for four performance, driving in a run in the sixth.

Manley fanned six Arkansas batters while Matthews put down eight Missourians on strikes.

Jim King or Bruce Farris is tonight's likely starter. The Foresters must win to stay in contention.

Little League Finals Tonight

As the 12th annual Sikeston Little League baseball tournament for nine and 10 year olds draws to a close tonight, there is a possibility that it might end in a Sikeston vs Sikeston match.

In last night's games, Sikeston's All-Stars won two games, taking an 11-2 win over Charleston and Portageville suffered a 19-0 setback. The other game had Ilmo-Scott City scoring 26 runs to take a 26-1 victory over Richland.

Tonight's schedule finds the Aces going against Ilmo-Scott City in the first game at 5:30 p.m. followed at 7 p.m. by the loser playing Portageville in the consolation bracket. At 8:30 p.m. the winner meets the Sikeston All-Stars for the title.

The All-Stars opened last night's action against Charleston and quickly overcame a 1-0 deficit in the second inning and went on to their 11-2 victory.

Lynn Miller and Billy Shatzley collected two hits each while the team banged out nine safeties including the tournament's first honor coming off the bat of Roy Bowman in the fifth inning with two men on. In all, the Stars collected three triples and a double to go along with the homer.

Ken Stokes absorbed the victory with a three-hit performance. Jim Davis lost.

The Stars pushed across eight runs in the fifth to sew up the victory.

Ilmo - Scott City's little leaguers had 15 runners cross the plate in the bottom half of the first inning after Richland jumped to a 1-0 lead in the top of the inning and added an additional 10 in the second and one in the third before calling it quits.

The ISC All-Stars banged out 13 hits in their three innings of play, including two homers by Grant Volkerding, two doubles by Rich Schwartz and Mike Schaefer, three doubles by Danny Brooks and a lone double by Steve Hanschen.

Danny Brooks limited the Richland batsmen to no-hits in four innings.

Brooks led the hitting attack with three safeties.

The Sikeston All-Stars came back in the nightcap and posted their second victory of the night, smashing Portageville 19-0 behind the no-hit pitching performance of Billy Shotzley, who faced 15 men in four innings, giving up two bases on balls and fanning seven.

Lynn Miller led the seven-hit All-Star attack with three hits, two triples and a double.

Sikeston scored one run in the first inning and added nine in both the second and third innings.

Potlatch Takes Loss

Sikeston finds itself trailing in the best of three playoff series with Pine Bluff, Ark. (1-0) for the regional baseball championship and the right to move into the Midwest regional at Lamar, Colo., next week.

The Potlatch Forest squad absorbed a 4-1 setback in its opening contest, played at VFW stadium last night and faces a do or die situation tonight in its 8 p.m. encounter with the Arkansans.

Pine Bluff broke a 1-1 deadlock with a run in the sixth and iced the victory with a pair of runs in the seventh inning.

Rudy Manley was tagged for five hits as the Arkansans, Roy Matthews checked the Foresters to three hits, including the game's only extra base blast, a triple off Richard Montgomery's bat to lead off the first. Montgomery scored on Mike Garner's sacrifice in the first for the only Forester run.

Bo Hardy led the Pine Bluff batting attack with a two for four performance, driving in a run in the sixth.

Manley fanned six Arkansas batters while Matthews put down eight Missourians on strikes.

Jim King or Bruce Farris is tonight's likely starter. The Foresters must win to stay in contention.

Oran, Scott Central Score Wins In SEMO Action

Oran and Scott Central won games last night, setting up the show down of the two teams at Morley at 4 p.m. this afternoon for the SEMO high school league baseball crown.

Oran clubbed Delta 7-3 while Scott Central shut out Benton 8-0.

Randy Boley pitched a three hitter for Scott Central. Morris Karnes and Steven Miles provided the bat power. Karnes blasted a home run and Miles banged out two doubles.

Larry Dempister gave up seven hits in seven innings, was tagged for eight runs and the loss.

At Oran, Mark Tenkhoff pitched a three hitter, striking out six and getting relief help from Wayne Graham, who fanned two and gave up two singles.

George Cox was the losing hurler, allowing five hits and fanning five.

Larry Whorton led the hitting attack with a pair of safeties as Oran scored three in the first, and two in the fifth and sixth innings.

Delta scored its three runs in the sixth on a walk and a hit batsman with three walks.

SEATTLE AP - Charles O. Finley was expected in Seattle today to discuss with city, county and state officials the possibility of moving the Kansas City A's to that city.

The Seattle Times reported this Friday, saying Finley apparently wants to meet quietly with the officials concerning a move.

Finley told directors of both major leagues Thursday in Chicago that he has hired a management consultant firm to help determine the future of the American League club's franchise. Oakland and Seattle were mentioned as possible locations if the A's leave Kansas City.

Air Marshal Dunlap Plans Retirement; MacBrien to Be NORAD Deputy Chief

COLORADO SPRINGS — (NNS) — Air Marshal C. R. (Larry) Dunlap, the North American Air Defense Command's deputy commander in chief for the past three years, will retire from the Royal Canadian Air Force Aug. 25.

He will be succeeded in the post at NORAD headquarters here by Air Marshal William Ross MacBrien, 53, of Ottawa, who has been assistant chief of staff at Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers Europe, since October 1962.

The 59-year-old Air Marshal Dunlap, whose rank is equivalent to that of a U.S. three-star general, has 39 years' military service.

During that career he played a major role in the planning that led to the establishment of NORAD nearly a decade ago. He also saw air defense enter a new dimension when the NORAD Combat Operations Center moved underground and beneath the granite hardness of Cheyenne Mountain here.

The fruition of that 10-year effort to give the nerve center of the continent-wide air defense system a greater chance at surviving an enemy blow, came during his service as deputy commander in chief of NORAD.

Taking the post in August of 1964, Air Marshal Dunlap succeeded retiring Air Marshal C. R. Slemon to become the second man to serve as the NORAD deputy commander in chief.

In that position he shares with the commander in chief, U.S. Air Force Gen. Raymond J. Reeves, the responsibility for operational control of all air defense forces assigned to the international command to carry out its mission of air defense of Canada and the U.S.

Canada's Minister of National Defence, The Honorable Paul T. Hellyer, cited the officer's career as being "distinctive for its close interplay with the Navy and Army in Canada, and with members of the military forces of the various countries with which Canada is associated in the NATO and NORAD alliances."

The defense minister expressed his personal appreciation "and that of the government for Air Marshal Dunlap's devoted and efficient service."

He noted, "For Air Marshal Dunlap, this is the culmination of a long and distinguished career in the Canadian Forces, one which included an unusual variety of operational and staff appointments."

Air Marshal Dunlap

Air Marshal MacBrien

Born at Sydney Mines, Nova Scotia, Air Marshal Dunlap's early service included several years of flying in some of the remote areas in Canada on aerial photography and mapping operations.

For outstanding wartime service in command of bomber wings he was made a commander of the Order of the British Empire and awarded the U.S. Silver Star and the French Croix de Guerre.

After the war he served in a series of senior staff and command appointments, including deputy chief of staff for Operations at SHAPE, an assignment which he held before being appointed Chief of the Air Staff at Royal Canadian Air Force Headquarters in Ottawa in September 1962.

Some years ago Air Marshal Dunlap, during his tour of duty as Vice-Chief of the Air Staff, was in charge of the Canadian section of a study group established to examine the necessity for an integrated system for the protection of Canada and the United States against air attack.

This group, made up of officers of the Canadian Army, Navy and Air Force, as well as members of the Defence Research Board and the Department of External Affairs, submitted recommendations to the Chiefs of Staff Committee and, through them, to the Canadian Government, strongly supporting the need for air defense integration.

This led to the Canada-United States agreement covering the organization known as NORAD.

Mr. Hellyer said Air Marshal MacBrien is well qualified for his new appointment at NORAD, and takes to the post more than 31 years' service with the RCAF.

During World War II he commanded a fighter wing in England and following the invasion of "Fortress Europe," commanded the Canadian Fighter Sector.

Among the senior appointments he has held since the war are chief of Operations at RCAF headquarters and air officer commanding, RCAF Air Defence Command. In October 1962 he became assistant to the chief of staff at SHAPE, and since July 1966 has also been deputy chief of staff for logistics and Administration at the same headquarters.

A Few Interesting Facts

Dr. Kershner

HERE are some little known facts about the Union of South Africa:

. . . In 1965 the United States exported to South Africa $138 million worth of goods, and imported only $225 million worth from that country, showing a favorable trade balance to our country of $213 million.

. . . With only six percent of Africa's population, the Union of South Africa turned out about 40 percent of the industrial production of the continent.

. . . South Africa produced 80 percent of Africa's steel, 90 percent of its gold, and 60 percent of its electricity.

. . . During the last five years the wages of native South Africans rose nearly 40 percent. Their skills are improving, their standards of living rising, their fields of employment and occupation widening.

. . . Over 12,000 black people own their own businesses, some bank as much as $3,000 a day. Three are reputed to be millionaires.

. . . No youth who can pass the matriculation examination need miss a university education if he wants it — regardless of his race or color.

. . . There are more than 2,800 native South Africans who are university graduates.

. . . In the Union of South Africa, 83 percent of the black children are in school. This is much higher than in any other African country.

. . . Virtually every black child is within walking distance of a primary school . . . . Nowhere in independent Africa do people, regardless of race or color, have as high a standard of living, education and health services, as in South Africa . . . . About one million foreign black Africans work in South Africa. With great difficulty other millions are prevented from crossing the borders in search of the benefits to be found from living and working in South Africa. We Americans should keep in mind these facts about the Union of South Africa as we evaluate our nation's policies toward that country.

Expo 67 Plans to Lose Money

By ROGER DOUGHTY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

MONTREAL—(NEA)—Losing $138 million may not be the nicest way to spend the summer, but Pierre Dupuy, commissioner-general of Canada's Expo 67, plans to do just that. He also plans to enjoy every minute of the experience.

Mr. Dupuy, former ambassador to France, has been plotting Expo's course since September of 1963 when he took on his present post of top man for the Canadian Corporation, whose job it is to run the huge exhibition.

Ambassador Dupuy, who estimates he traveled two million miles and visited 125 countries during his three years of planning what Expo should and should not be, figures the big show will close Oct. 27 with a deficit of at least $138 million. In 1964, the original prediction for the deficit was a modest $44 million, but things just kept getting bigger and better as the years rolled along.

Unlike New York's late and little-lamented World's Fair, Expo is designed to win friends and influence people by losing money. Before the New York World's Fair opened in 1964, headman Robert Moses predicted that the big show would produce a surplus of $53 million. But, for reasons still being debated, the fair was a flop to the tune of a $44-million loss.

OFFICIAL HOSTESSES at the American Pavilion at Expo 67 are easy on the eyes in outfits praised for "artlessness and purity of design." There's plenty to see at Expo, including pretty girls.

The Canadians plan to spend about $380 million on Expo, with income estimated at $242 million. However, our neighbors to the north consider the deficit to be a short-term loss that will be offset by long-term gains. That kind of thinking may not put any money in the bank, but it also won't lead to any unexpected shocks, such as the type New York received at the close of the Flushing Meadows fiasco.

Since 1967 marks the 100th anniversary of Canada's confederation, the host country is going all out to make Expo a smashing success. Plans have been in the works for seven years, so the results should be impressive.

In 1960 Canada applied to the Bureau of International Exhibitions, the agency that sets down rules covering expositions, and applied for the 1967 celebration. The Soviet Union also applied and much to the sorrow of the Canadians, the Russians got the nod. However, the Soviets changed their minds and decided they didn't want to host the exhibition after all, and Canada was back in business.

As big as it is, Expo also plans to be the quietest exhibition in history. Public safety officers, equipped with sound meters, will be on the job all during the run of the exhibition. They plan to check on everything from mechanical equipment down to exhaust fans to make sure the noise level is kept down. There'll be no public address systems on the site, which should be a big help right there.

There's a special traffic control system designed to cut congestion in the Expo area.

There's even a closed circuit television system to be used to reunite lost children with their parents (so don't try to dump any kids while you're there) and caterers who can whip up buffalo steaks at a moment's notice.

All in all, representatives from Austria to Upper Volta will be on hand for what could turn out to be the biggest show in North America since the last glacier.

It should be a very cool affair.

Many U.N. Embassies Have Bought Old New York Homes of the Wealthy

By CHARLES STORER
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Some of the wealthiest families in American business and finance are among the former owners of stately old New York homes now used by foreign governments for their missions to the United Nations.

The handsome town houses, considered by many the choicest residential real estate in Manhattan, are located on and just off Fifth Avenue in a fashionable East Side district.

Many have been singled out by the city for preservation as historic landmarks. They are regarded as distinguished examples of styles of architecture and construction no longer employed in the city.

By a strange ideological twist, the town houses owned by Communist Romania and Yugoslavia for their U.N. delegations are linked by close family ties to Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, reputed to have been the richest man in America when he died in 1877.

These two onetime homes appear to be the most highly regarded among the 16 U.N. missions that have been chosen by the city for designation as landmarks.

The others among the 16 are the missions of Austria, Cuba, France, Greece, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Israel, Mali, Pakistan, the Philippines, Poland, Senegal and Tunisia.

The Romanian mission, a three-story stone building in what is said to be French 18th Century revival style, was built in 1929 for Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, the divorced wife of William K. Vanderbilt Jr., a great-grandson of the commodore.

The Vanderbilt millions came primarily from the New York Central Railroad but also from shipping and ferries in New York Harbor.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, born Virginia Fair, was the daughter of U.S. Sen. James Graham Fair of Nevada, who made a fortune in the Comstock Lode, a rich Nevada gold and silver strike of the mid 1800s.

The New York Landmarks Preservation Commission said the mission "is a prime example of the last phase of classical house building in the palatial manner."

The commission added that it "would be entirely at home amongst those small retreats which were built by courtiers throughout the 18th Century at Versailles."

The original cost of the house is not known, but a Romanian source said his government paid $300,000 for it 12 years ago.

The Romanians bought the house from the Chrysler family. After Mrs. Vanderbilt, it had been owned by Mrs. Byron C. Foy, daughter of Walter Chrysler, founder of the Chrysler Corp., the auto manufacturers.

Finding themselves cramped for space several years ago, the Romanians placed the building on the market and reportedly received an offer in excess of $600,000.

The offer was rejected.

Romanian officials also have considered adding another story to the building, but this plan is being held up because of fears it would detract from the value of the building in the event of an eventual decision to sell.

Another factor is the attitude of the city. The designation of a building as a landmark means that it may not be demolished or modified on the exterior.

Because of their diplomatic status, this provision may not apply to U.N. missions, which also are exempt from city real estate taxes, but the Romanians say they have no desire to get into a quarrel with the city or disturb friendly relations with their neighbors.

The Yugoslav mission, on Fifth Avenue, was built in 1903 for R. Livingston Beekman, a former governor of Rhode Island. It later was owned by Mrs. Emily Vanderbilt Sloane, a granddaughter of Commodore Vanderbilt.

Mrs. Sloane's husband, William D. Sloane, was a founder of a large New York store. After he died, his widow married Henry White, who served as U.S. ambassador in France and Italy.

THE YUGOSLAV U.N. MISSION has been described by the New York City Landmarks Preservation Commission as "the finest extant 'small' house on Fifth Avenue. It is at 854 Fifth Ave., was once owned by Mrs. Emily Vanderbilt Sloane, granddaughter of Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt.

The city landmarks commission describes the Yugoslav mission as "the finest extant 'small' house on the avenue." It is a narrow building of five stories and with a facade of stone. Its style is described as "French eclectic."

It was ignored in the recent series of bomb explosions blamed on exiled Yugoslav terrorists, which damaged the Yugoslav consulate in New York, the embassy in Washington and other Yugoslav government buildings elsewhere in the United States and Canada.

"The style is palatial," the landmarks commission said, and the house displays "a new dignity, restraint and purity of manner, if not of style, which sets it apart as not only 'avant-garde' but also as a definite high-water mark in the history of the town facade."

Warren & Wetmore, the architectural firm that designed the Yugoslav mission, also drew the plans for the Indian mission. A larger building, it was erected in 1900 for Marshall Orme Wilson, whose father, Richard T. Wilson, a reference work says, made a fortune selling cotton blankets at woolen prices to the Confederate government during the Civil War.

The younger Wilson's wife was Caroline Schermerhorn Astor, the great-granddaughter of John Jacob Astor, whose many millions came from furs and real estate. Her mother was Mrs. William Astor, the most prominent socialite of her era.

Mrs. Wilson, widowed and alone, died in the early 1940s and bequeathed the house and all its rich furnishings to a servant.

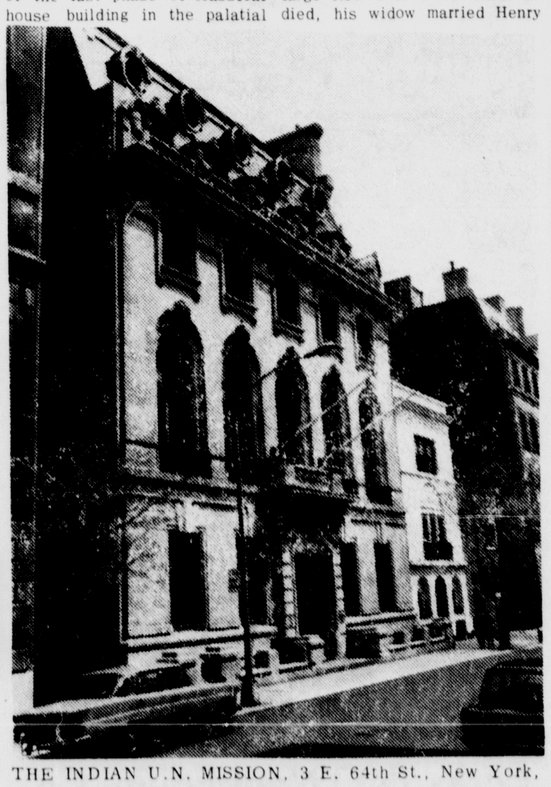

The Indian government bought it from the servant in 1948.

The oldest former home now used as a U.N. mission is that of the delegation of Senegal. This five-story brick building was put up in 1877, but landmark commission records do not disclose the original owner. The commission says the house has "a handsome door" and is "otherwise sophisticated in a plain kind of way."

The Greek mission was built in 1907 for George L. Rives, a prominent New York lawyer who was a trustee of the New York Public library. A Georgian-style home, it "shows itself in every particular as the work of (an architectural) firm of the first rank," the commission says.

The Polish mission was originally owned by Charles Scribner of the New York publishing house that bears his name. It was built for him in 1909 at a cost estimated at $85,000.

Next door is the mission of the Philippines delegation, which also is Poland's neighbor in the alphabetical list of U.N. members. It was built in 1916 for Harris Fahnestock, a member of a wealthy family of New York investment bankers.

THE INDIAN U.N. MISSION, 3 E. 64th St., New York, was built in 1900 for Marshall Orme Wilson whose wife was the great-granddaughter of John Jacob Astor and daughter of socialite Mrs. William Astor.

THE GREEK U.N. MISSION was built at 69 E. 79th St. in 1907 for George L. Rives, a prominent New York laywer. It is in Georgian style.

IT'S UP TO YOU

By Howard E. Kershner, L.H.D.

A Few Interesting Facts

HERE are some little known facts about the Union of South Africa:

Dr. Kershner

. . . In 1965 the United States exported to South Africa $438 million worth of goods, and imported only $225 million worth from that country, showing a favorable trade balance to our country of $213 million.

. . . With only six percent of Africa's population, the Union of South Africa turned out about 40 percent of the industrial production of the continent.

. . . South Africa produced 80 percent of Africa's steel, 90 percent of its gold, and 60 percent of its electricity.

. . . During the last five years the wages of native South Africans rose nearly 10 percent. Their skills are improving, their standards of living rising, their fields of employment and occupation widening.

. . . Over 12,000 black people own their own businesses, some bank as much as $3,000 a day. Three are reputed to be millionaires.

. . . No youth who can pass the matriculation examination need miss a university education if he wants it — regardless of his race or color.

. . . There are more than 2,800 native South Africans who are university graduates.

. . . In the Union of South Africa, 83 percent of the black children are in school. This is much higher than in any other African country.

. . . Virtually every black child is within walking distance of a primary school . . . . Nowhere in independent Africa do people, regardless of race or color, have as high a standard of living, education and health services, as in South Africa . . . . About one million foreign black Africans work in South Africa. With great difficulty other millions are prevented from crossing the borders in search of the benefits to be found from living and working in South Africa. We Americans should keep in mind these facts about the Union of South Africa as we evaluate our nation's policies toward that country.

Expo 67 Plans to Lose Money

By ROGER DOUGHTY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

MONTREAL—(NEA)—Losing $138 million may not be the nicest way to spend the summer, but Pierre Dupuy, commissioner-general of Canada's Expo 67, plans to do just that. He also plans to enjoy every minute of the experience.

Mr. Dupuy, former ambassador to France, has been plotting Expo's course since September of 1963 when he took on his present post of top man for the Canadian Corporation, whose job it is to run the huge exhibition.

Ambassador Dupuy, who estimates he traveled two million miles and visited 125 countries during his three years of planning what Expo should and should not be, figures the big show will close Oct. 27 with a deficit of at least $138 million. In 1964, the original prediction for the deficit was a modest $44 million, but things just kept getting bigger and better as the years rolled along.

Unlike New York's late and little-lamented World's Fair, Expo is designed to win friends and influence people by losing money. Before the New York World's Fair opened in 1964, headman Robert Moses predicted that the big show would produce a surplus of $53 million. But, for reasons still being debated, the fair was a flop to the tune of a $44-million loss.

OFFICIAL HOSTESSES at the American Pavilion at Expo 67 are easy on the eyes in outfits praised for "artlessness and purity of design." There's plenty to see at Expo, including pretty girls.

The Canadians plan to spend about $380 million on Expo, with income estimated at $242 million. However, our neighbors to the north consider the deficit to be a short-term loss that will be offset by long-term gains. That kind of thinking may not put any money in the bank, but it also won't lead to any unexpected shocks, such as the type New York received at the close of the Flushing Meadows fiasco.

Since 1967 marks the 100th anniversary of Canada's confederation, the host country is going all out to make Expo a smashing success. Plans have been in the works for seven years, so the results should be impressive.

In 1960 Canada applied to the Bureau of International Exhibitions, the agency that sets down rules covering expositions, and applied for the 1967 celebration. The Soviet Union also applied and much to the sorrow of the Canadians, the Russians got the nod. However, the Soviets changed their minds and decided they didn't want to host the exhibition after all, and Canada was back in business.

As big as it is, Expo also plans to be the quietest exhibition in history. Public safety officers, equipped with sound meters, will be on the job all during the run of the exhibition. They plan to check on everything from mechanical equipment down to exhaust fans to make sure the noise level is kept down. There'll be no public address systems on the site, which should be a big help right there.

There's a special traffic control system designed to cut congestion in the Expo area.

There's even a closed circuit television system to be used to reunite lost children with their parents (so don't try to dump any kids while you're there) and caterers who can whip up buffalo steaks at a moment's notice.

All in all, representatives from Austria to Upper Volta will be on hand for what could turn out to be the biggest show in North America since the last glacier.

It should be a very cool affair.

Air Marshal Dunlap Plans Retirement; MacBrien to Be NORAD Deputy Chief

COLORADO SPRINGS — (NNS) — Air Marshal C. R. (Larry) Dunlap, the North American Air Defense Command's deputy commander in chief for the past three years, will retire from the Royal Canadian Air Force Aug. 25.

He will be succeeded in the post at NORAD headquarters here by Air Marshal William Ross MacBrien, 53, of Ottawa, who has been assistant chief of staff at Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers Europe, since October 1962.

The 59-year-old Air Marshal Dunlap, whose rank is equivalent to that of a U.S. three-star general, has 39 years' military service.

Air Marshal Dunlap

Air Marshal MacBrien

During that career he played a major role in the planning that led to the establishment of NORAD nearly a decade ago. He also saw air defense enter a new dimension when the NORAD Combat Operations Center moved underground and beneath the granite hardness of Cheyenne Mountain here.

The fruition of that 10-year effort to give the nerve center of the continent-wide air defense system a greater chance at surviving an enemy blow, came during his service as deputy commander in chief of NORAD.

Taking the post in August of 1964, Air Marshal Dunlap succeeded retiring Air Marshal C. R. Slemon to become the second man to serve as the NORAD deputy commander in chief.

In that position he shares with the commander in chief, U.S. Air Force Gen. Raymond J. Reeves, the responsibility for operational control of all air defense forces assigned to the international command to carry out its mission of air defense of Canada and the U.S.

Canada's Minister of National Defence, The Honorable Paul T. Hellyer, cited the officer's career as being "distinctive for its close interplay with the Navy and Army in Canada, and with members of the military forces of the various countries with which Canada is associated in the NATO and NORAD alliances."

The defense minister expressed his personal appreciation "and that of the government for Air Marshal Dunlap's devoted and efficient service."

He noted, "For Air Marshal Dunlap, this is the culmination of a long and distinguished career in the Canadian Forces, one which included an unusual variety of operational and staff appointments."

Born at Sydney Mines, Nova Scotia, Air Marshal Dunlap's early service included several years of flying in some of the remote areas in Canada on aerial photography and mapping operations.

For outstanding wartime service in command of bomber wings he was made a commander of the Order of the British Empire and awarded the U.S. Silver Star and the French Croix de Guerre.

After the war he served in a series of senior staff and command appointments, including deputy chief of staff for Operations at SHAPE, an assignment which he held before being appointed Chief of the Air Staff at Royal Canadian Air Force Headquarters in Ottawa in September 1962.

Some years ago Air Marshal Dunlap, during his tour of duty as Vice-Chief of the Air Staff, was in charge of the Canadian section of a study group established to examine the necessity for an integrated system for the protection of Canada and the United States against air attack.

This group, made up of officers of the Canadian Army, Navy and Air Force, as well as members of the Defence Research Board and the Department of External Affairs, submitted recommendations to the Chiefs of Staff Committee and, through them, to the Canadian Government, strongly supporting the need for air defense integration.

This led to the Canada-United States agreement covering the organization known as NORAD.

Mr. Hellyer said Air Marshal MacBrien is well qualified for his new appointment at NORAD, and takes to the post more than 31 years' service with the RCAF.

During World War II he commanded a fighter wing in England and following the invasion of "Fortress Europe," commanded the Canadian Fighter Sector.

Among the senior appointments he has held since the war are chief of Operations at RCAF headquarters and air officer commanding, RCAF Air Defence Command. In October 1962 he became assistant to the chief of staff at SHAPE, and since July 1966 has also been deputy chief of staff for Logistics and Administration at the same headquarters.

MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS GREAT CRIPPLER

Strikes at Young Adults

Multiple sclerosis is "the grea crippler of young adults." An esti mated 500,000 Americans, young adults, mothers and fathers, in the active years of community and family service between 20 and 40 have been stricken by MS and related diseases. Cause, prevention and cure remain unknown. The National Multiple Sclerosis Society fights MS through programs of national and international research, community patient services, and public and professional education.

THE PLUMBING may be primitive, but the shower is still effective for a trooper of the U.S. 9th Infantry Division using the equipment at hand during a rest period in Vietnam.

Many U.N. Embassies Have Bought Old New York Homes of the Wealthy

By CHARLES STORER
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) – Some of the wealthiest families in American business and finance are among the former owners of stately old New York homes now used by foreign governments for their missions to the United Nations.

The handsome town houses, considered by many the choicest residential real estate in Manhattan, are located on and just off Fifth Avenue in a fashionable East Side district.

Many have been singled out by the city for preservation as historic landmarks. They are regarded as distinguished examples of styles of architecture and construction no longer employed in the city.

By a strange ideological twist, the town houses owned by Communist Romania and Yugoslavia for their U.N. delegations are linked by close family ties to Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, reputed to have been the richest man in America when he died in 1877.

These two onetime homes appear to be the most highly regarded among the 16 U.N. missions that have been chosen by the city for designation as landmarks.

The others among the 16 are the missions of Austria, Cuba, France, Greece, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Israel, Mali, Pakistan, the Philippines, Poland, Senegal and Tunisia.

The Romanian mission, a three-story stone building in what is said to be French 18th Century revival style, was built in 1929 for Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, the divorced wife of William K. Vanderbilt Jr., a great-grandson of the commodore.

The Vanderbilt millions came primarily from the New York Central Railroad but also from shipping and ferries in New York Harbor.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, born Virginia Fair, was the daughter of U.S. Sen. James Graham Fair of Nevada, who made a fortune in the Comstock Lode, a rich Nevada gold and silver strike of the mid 1800s.

The New York Landmarks Preservation Commission said the mission "is a prime example of the last phase of classical house building in the palatial manner."

The commission added that it "would be entirely at home amongst those small retreats which were built by courtiers throughout the 18th Century at Versailles."

The original cost of the house is not known, but a Romanian source said his government paid $300,000 for it 12 years ago.

The Romanians bought the house from the Chrysler family. After Mrs. Vanderbilt, it had been owned by Mrs. Byron C. Foy, daughter of Walter Chrysler, founder of the Chrysler Corp., the auto manufacturers.

Finding themselves cramped for space several years ago, the Romanians placed the building on the market and reportedly received an offer in excess of $600,000.

The offer was rejected.

Romanian officials also have considered adding another story to the building, but this plan is being held up because of fears it would detract from the value of the building in the event of an eventual decision to sell.

Another factor is the attitude of the city. The designation of a building as a landmark means that it may not be demolished or modified on the exterior.

Because of their diplomatic status, this provision may not apply to U.N. missions, which also are exempt from city real estate taxes, but the Romanians say they have no desire to get into a quarrel with the city or disturb friendly relations with their neighbors.

The Yugoslav mission, on Fifth Avenue, was built in 1903 for R. Livingston Beekman, a former governor of Rhode Island. It later was owned by Mrs. Emily Vanderbilt Sloane, a granddaughter of Commodore Vanderbilt.

Mrs. Sloane's husband, William D. Sloane, was a founder of a large New York store. After he died, his widow married Henry White, who served as U.S. ambassador in France and Italy.

THE YUGOSLAV U.N. MISSION has been described by the New York City Landmarks Preservation Commission as "the finest extant 'small' house on Fifth Avenue. It is at 854 Fifth Ave., was once owned by Mrs. Emily Vanderbilt Sloane, granddaughter of Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt.

The city landmarks commission describes the Yugoslav mission as "the finest extant 'small' house on the avenue." It is a narrow building of five stories and with a facade of stone. Its style is described as "French eclectic."

It was ignored in the recent series of bombexplosions blamed on exiled Yugoslav terrorists, which damaged the Yugoslav consulate in New York, the embassy in Washington and other Yugoslav government buildings elsewhere in the United States and Canada.

"The style is palatial," the landmarks commission said, and the house displays "a new dignity, restraint and purity of manner, if not of style, which sets it apart as not only 'avant-garde' but also as a definite high-water mark in the history of the town facade."

Warren & Wetmore, the architectural firm that designed the Yugoslav mission, also drew the plans for the Indian mission. A larger building, it was erected in 1900 for Marshall Orme Wilson, whose father, Richard T. Wilson, a reference work says, made a fortune selling cotton blankets at woolen prices to the Confederate government during the Civil War.

The younger Wilson's wife was Caroline Schermerhorn Astor, the great-granddaughter of John Jacob Astor, whose many millions came from furs and real estate. Her mother was Mrs. William Astor, the most prominent socialite of her era.

Mrs. Wilson, widowed and alone, died in the early 1940s and bequeathed the house and all its rich furnishings to a servant.

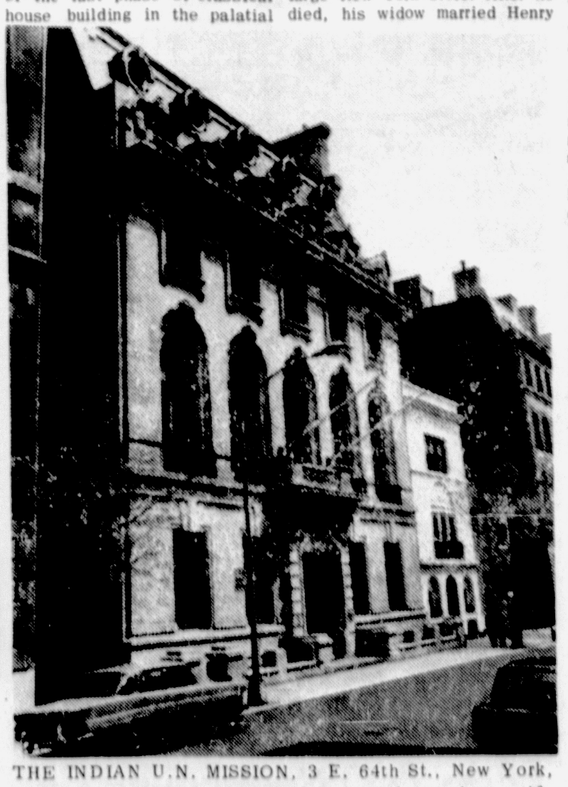

The Indian government bought it from the servant in 1948.

The oldest former home now used as a U.N. mission is that of the delegation of Senegal. This five-story brick building was put up in 1877, but landmark commission records do not disclose the original owner. The commission says the house has "a handsome door" and is "otherwise sophisticated in a plain kind of way."

The Greek mission was built in 1907 for George L. Rives, a prominent New York lawyer who was a trustee of the New York Public library. A Georgian-style home, it "shows itself in every particular as the work of (an architectural) firm of the first rank," the commission says.

The Polish mission was originally owned by Charles Scribner of the New York publishing house that bears his name. It was built for him in 1909 at a cost estimated at $85,000.

Next door is the mission of the Philippines delegation, which also is Poland's neighbor in the alphabetical list of U.N. members. It was built in 1916 for Harris Fahnestock, a member of a wealthy family of New York investment bankers.

THE INDIAN U.N. MISSION, 3 E. 64th St., New York, was built in 1900 for Marshall Orme Wilson whose wife was the great-granddaughter of John Jacob Astor and daughter of socialite Mrs. William Astor.

THE GREEK U.N. MISSION was built at 69 E. 79th St. in 1907 for George L. Rives, a prominent New York laywer. It is in Georgian style.

BURTON BROWN, Charleston, examines aerial photographs under a stereoscope.

Stereoscope Aids Soil Scientist

Three dimentional viewing of topography is obtained by using two similar photographs in a stereoscope. These photographs are of the same area, but were taken in different positions.

The stereoscope is of more benefit to the Soil Conservation Service when used on photographs taken in the hills but it also can be used to good advantage in the delta area.

Topography of a particular area can be studied before a field investigation. This benefits the soil scientist since many soils are related to topographic positions.

Besides showing topography, it also aids in joining completed soil maps, determing slope, defining other landscape features leevees, borrow pits, and drainage ditches - and outlining drainage areas for determining runoff, design of farm ponds and lakes.

FARM LABOR BULLETIN

STATE SUMMARY

Southeast Missouri reports excessive rainfall, while average rainfall was general through most of the remaining areas.

71 unfilled year - round and 19 seasonal openings on hand as of July 31. 32 year-round and 2,956 seasonal placements were made last week with milo rogueing, corn detasseling, haying, peach picking and cotton chopping demanding most of the seasonal labor. VFPR's contributed 287 additional placements.

850 workers were referred within the state from one local office area to another to help alleviate local seasonal labor shortages, this was primarily milo rogueing and hybrid corn detasseling. 100 workers were referred for in-plant work, tomato and cherry picking in the Great Lake States.

West Plains reports single male workers available for work in the northern states.

SOUTHEAST

Sikeston: 202 South Kingshighway - Telephone: Granite 1-2731.

The Sikeston area has very little local work to offer. The bulk of workers available for out-of-area work have gone or are committed. Out-of-area in-plant orders are on file and some shortage of workers to fill these is expected.

Farm Labor Information Station & Rest Camp, Route No. 2, Sikeston.

The Camp served 58 migrants last week with 46 en route to Michigan and 12 going to Texas.

Kennett: 405 St. Francis Street - Telephone: Tuxedo 8-3184.

The Dunklin county peach harvest started this week with 18 growers harvesting one of the best peach crops in several years. The price and demand is holding real good. Students in the local areas make up a good part of the labor. The watermelon harvest has started and should really get going next week. Several applicants that were referred to Mobility have been placed on jobs in Northern Missouri.

Cape Girardeau: 231 North Main Street - Telephone: Edgewater 5-6666.

Due to inclement weather conditions, demand for seasonal workers has been very light for the past seven days. Short 10 cannery workers for in-plant work located in State of Illinois. All workers interested should contact this office immediately.

Poplar Bluff: 211 Pine Street - Telephone: 785-9606.

Local showers have been falling but more rain is needed. All crops are in fair condition. No farm work going on in this area. No farm families for referral to other areas at present time.

West Plains: 111 Walnut Street - Telephone: 256-3158.

Local farm orders slow. Have referred several more applicants to Mobility for interview travel to job sites in North Missouri and Iowa. Have several singles interested in cannery work in northern states.

Caruthersville: 300 Ward Street - Telephone: Edison 3-2416.

Heavy rains, especially in and around the Caruthersville and Hayti areas, completely stopped farm activities during the week. Light to moderate rainfall over the other areas of the county were very beneficial to crops and only delayed activities for a day or two. Cotton crops are showing much improvement but are still below normal for this time of year. Soybean crops are good over most of the area. Ginning operations are not expected to start before October, which will be from four to five weeks later than usual.

Gun Accident Hospitalizes Morley Girl

FERTILIZER BOOSTED HAY YIELD of meadow in Montgomery County. Merle Vaughan, county extension director, says bales on left, stacked three high, represent area receiving 60-40-40 fertilizer treatment per acre. The yield was one and one half times greater than from unfertilized area, represented by two - bale stack in center. At right, the lone bale indicates yield from area receiving 220 pounds of a soil conditioner per acre. Per acre yield, harvested June 23, was about 5,450 pounds from fertilized land, 3,860 pounds from untreated acreage, and 1,900 pounds from area treated with soil conditioner.

No Pat Answers to Improving Pastures

BENTON -- Gov. Warren E. Hearnes has designated August as pasture improvement month.

No doubt you will see newspaper "ads" by machinery, fertilizer, seed dealers, and lending agencies promoting pasture improvement. Why are these people willing to spend their hard-earned money promoting pasture improvement?

I think the answer is quite obvious. Naturally, they expect to get some milage out of their ads toward the promotion of products they have to sell. However, their primary purpose is the promotion of pasture improvement. They are aware of the fact that if their customers make more money so will they.

The future of a business firm supplying products to agriculture is much brighter if the crop and livestock production of that region is on a sound economic basis.

Historically, cash crops such as cotton, corn, soybeans, and wheat have received much more attention than pasture and hay crops in the Delta area of Missouri. However, this by no way means that forages are not important to the economy of the area. Nor does it mean that forage crops are not profitable. It is the contention of this writer that they will become even more important to the area in the future, both from the standpoint of the dollars of sales generated and the profit of individual producers.

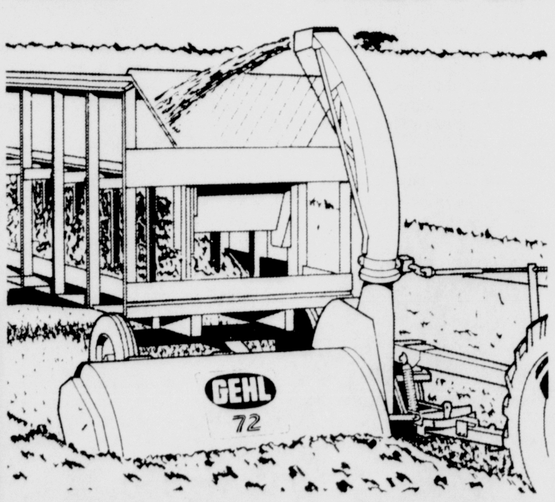

Labor costs have increased and will continue to increase and the supply of good labor is not overly abundant. During the past two years many farmers have employed their farm labor on a full-time, year-around basis. No doubt this trend will continue. How is this related to pasture improvement? Quite simply! It is extremely costly to pay $1 to $1.50 per hour for labor for a year and only have the labor productively employed six to eight months out of the year. The addition or expansion of livestock enterprises which have maximum labor requirements during the slack periods of the years is one way of spreading out these labor costs.

However, pasture and hay or, for that matter, any other crop will not make interest or principal payments on land costing from $300 to $600 per acre if they are yielding only one half their capacity.

There is no pat answer or set of rules to follow which carries a guarantee of success attached on pasture improvement. For some producers complete pasture renovation may be the most economical choice; while others may need to revamp their liming program and increase their applications of nitrogen, phosphate, and potash. There may be others who need to do a better job of pasture management. For example, overgrazing is one of the quickest ways (other than a plow) of destroying a good pasture particularly during a drought.

What should you do to improve your pasture or hay crops? This is a decision that only you can make because you pay the bills or suffer the consequences. However, there is an abundant supply of information on pasture and hay crops at your University Extension Center available upon request which may help you to make a better decision.

I-57 Work Scheduled

CHARLESTON -- An interchange of letters between Illinois Division of Highways and the Missouri State Highway Department, and then between Mo. SHD and the office of Governor Warren E. Hearnes has established a rough schedule of work on I-57 in this area.

The Illinois Division of Highways says: "The portion from Marion to east of Ullin is completed and open. From east of Ullin to east of Mounds the highway is under construction, and it is anticipated that it will be completed in the fall of 1968.

"From east of Mounds to he river and the river bridge, completion is anticipated for late 1970."

On this side of the Mississippi, G. M. Threlkeld, public information director for the Missouri State Highway Department advises; "The bride itself . . . is a joint project with Illinois, and we plan to take bids for the substructure of the bridge during the 1968 fiscal year. Construction for the balance of the bride is scheduled for the 1969 fiscal year.

"Construction for the portion of about 9.3 miles from U.S. Route 60 to the Mississipi River is scheduled for the 1970 fiscal year."

Since the highway department's fiscal year beings on July 1, the start of construction of the short section of I-57 in Missouri, from a point about two miles east of Charleston to the River cannot be expected until mid-1969-roughly two years from now.

Acquisition of right of way for the 9.3 mile stretch of I-57 was schedule for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1967 and that work should be in progress now.

BURTON BROWN, Charleston, examines aerial photographs under a stereoscope.

Stereoscope Aids Soil Scientist

Three dimentional viewing of topography is obtained by using two similar photographs in a stereoscope. These photographs are of the same area, but were taken in different positions.

The stereoscope is of more benefit to the Soil Conservation Service when used on photographs taken in the hills but it also can be used to good advantage in the delta area.

Topography of a particular area can be studied before a field investigation. This benefits the soil scientist since many soils are related to topographic positions.

Besides showing topography, it also aids in joining completed soil maps, determing slope, defining other landscape features leevees, borrow pits, and drainage ditches - and outlining drainage areas for determining runoff, design of farm ponds and lakes.

FARM LABOR BULLETIN

STATE SUMMARY

Southeast Missouri reports excessive rainfall, while average rainfall was general through most of the remaining areas.

71 unfilled year - round and 19 seasonal openings on hand as of July 31. 32 year-round and 2,956 seasonal placements were made last week with milo rogueing, corn detasseling, haying, peach picking and cotton chopping demanding most of the seasonal labor. VFPR's contributed 287 additional placements.

850 workers were referred within the state from one local office area to another to help alleviate local seasonal labor shortages, this was primarily milo rogueing and hybrid corn detasseling. 100 workers were referred for in- plant work, tomato and cherry picking in the Great Lake States.

West Plains reports single male workers available for work in the northern states.

SOUTHEAST

Sikeston: 202 South Kingshighway - Telephone: Granite 1-2731.

The Sikeston area has very little local work to offer. The bulk of workers available for out-of-area work have gone or are committed. Out-of-area inplant orders are on file and some shortage of workers to fill these is expected.

Farm Labor Information Station & Rest Camp, Route No. 2, Sikeston.

The Camp served 58 migrants last week with 46 enroute to Michigan and 12 going to Texas.

Kennett: 405 St. Francis Street - Telephone: Tuxedo 8-3184.

The Dunklin county peach harvest started this week with 18 growers harvesting one of the best peach crops in several years. The price and demand is holding real good. Students in the local areas make up a good part of the labor. The watermelon harvest has started and should really get going next week. Several applicants that were referred to Mobility have been placed on jobs in Northern Missouri.

Cape Girardeau: 231 North Main Street - Telephone: Edgewater 5-6666.

Due to inclement weather conditions, demand for seasonal workers has been very light for the past seven days. Short 10 cannery workers for in-plant work located in State of Illinois. All workers interested should contact this office immediately.

Poplar Bluff: 211 Pine Street - Telephone: 785-9606.

Local showers have been falling but more rain is needed. All crops are in fair condition. No farm work going on in this area. No farm families for referral to other areas at present time.

West Plains: 111 Walnut Street - Telephone: 256-3158.

Local farm orders slow. Have referred several more applicants to Mobility for interview travel to job sites in North Missouri and Iowa. Have several singles interested in cannery work in northern states.

Caruthersville: 300 Ward Street - Telephone: Edison 3-2416.

Heavy rains, especially in and around the Caruthersville and Hayti areas, completely stopped farm activities during the week. Light to moderate rainfall over the other areas of the county were very beneficial to crops and only delayed activities for a day or two. Cotton crops are showing much improvement but are still below normal for this time of year. Soybean crops are good over most of the area. Ginning operations are not expected to start before October, which will be from four to five weeks later than usual.

Senators Meet With State 4-H Members

WASHINGTON -- Missouri Senators Stuart Symington and Edward H. Long met with the Missouri delegation to the National 4-H Citizenship Short Course here. There are 35 4-H club members from Southeast Missouri attending the short course.

"The more young people take an interest in government, the better it is for our country," Senator Symington told the group. In answer to a question from the 4-H'ers Senator Symington also discussed the Vietnamese war. "We can either take action to move forward or get out of Vietnam," he said.

Senator Long urged the 4-H'ers to continue their active interest in citizenship.

"The government belongs to you people," he said. "The trouble is, some government agency people get to thinking the government belongs to them," Senator Long added.

Carolyn Lang, and Fred Schwartz, gave reports to the senators on the 4-H Citizenship Short Course and on 4-H club work. Earlier in the day the group went on a special tour of the work. Earlier in the day the group went on a special tour of the White House. The tour was arranged by Senator Symington. The group also toured the supreme court building and the Library of Congress.

A team of four Missourians has been selected to compete in a citizenship quiz contest. They are Terry Conrad, Sedgewickville, Pam Wampler, Farmington, John Plummer, Charleston, and Diana Johnson, Shook. They will compete with teams from five other states attending the 4-H citizenship short course.

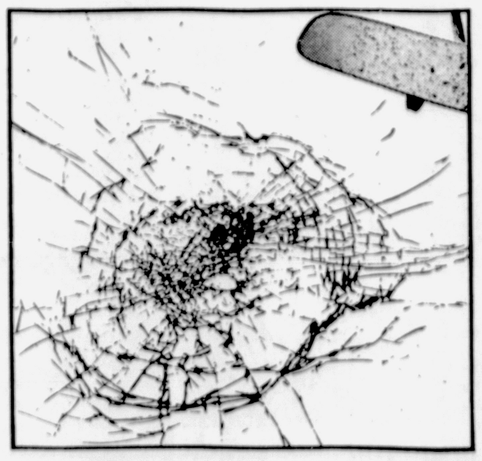

Counties represented at the citizenship short course are Cape Girardeau, Perry, St. Francois, Ste. Genevieve, Bollinger, Iron, Dunklin, Pemiscott, Mississippi, Wayne, Washington, Butler, Stoddard, and Scott.

This conference is sponsored by the National 4-H Club Foundation and in cooperation with the University of Missouri extension division.

The last thing Frank expected was someone running the stop sign.

The very last thing.

Stop signs don't stop cars. Drivers stop cars. Make sure you do and make sure he has. There's very little satisfaction in being dead right when you're dead.

Wherever, whenever you drive . . . drive defensively. Watch out for the other guy. He may be the kind who'll stop at nothing.

A Plane Crash . . . A Heroine's Medal

FORT SHAFTER, Hawaii (ANF)—A Women's Army Corps specialist has received the Soldier's Medal, a U. S. Army noncombat heroism award, for her rescue work following an airplane crash.

Sp5 Carrol Y. Picard of Livonia, La., aided an injured passenger and helped reduce the chance of fire after the Army aircraft in which she was riding crashed Dec. 18, 1964, during a flight from Fort Huachuca, Ariz., to Fort Bliss, Texas.

She and another passenger were injured when the plane crashed. The Soldier's Medal citation described Specialist Picard's actions:

"Without regard to her personal safety and injuries, she minimized the fire hazard in the fume-filled cabin by disabling the aircraft electrical system and, unassisted, extracted the unconscious passenger from the wreckage."

Sp5 Carrol Y. Picard

She then helped the semi-conscious passenger walk five miles through freezing weather to obtain medical aid. Specialist Picard has been a draftsman at Headquarters, U. S. Army, Pacific, since September 1966.

SWIMSUIT CHOICES — Summer's young fashionables can choose a bikini or a one-piece suit and still be in the swim of fashion, so long as the styling's feminine. Both looks are interpreted here in sheer dotted cotton, with color-on-white dots giving a frosted look. The shirt-styled cover-up teams with either suit. By Catalina.

QUICK TIPS for Smooth Trips

By Paula Johnson
Woman's Representative
American Oil Company

This summer most families will be exploring the country by car, largely because of the comfort and convenience auto travel offers. Discovering America can be even more fun and convenient with thorough advance planning, the kind that starts with a trip plan. You can order good plans—complete with marked maps; hotel, motel, and highway information, and expense-record forms—from major oil companies or through membership in organizations like the American Oil Motor Club.

Request that your maps show the scenic route if you really want to explore. Take a direct route back if you must, or an alternate scenic route if you have the time. Out-of-the-way places can add unprecedented pleasure and adventure to a trip. Your wandering needn't be haphazard, however. The second part of good planning is knowing where you can get accurate local information—at As You Travel service stations, for example, or the special tourist-information booths set up in many cities during the travel season. (The emergency information local sources have—where to find a good doctor, lawyer, or veterinarian, for instance—can be mighty helpful, too, if you suddenly need it.)

So you don't miss the unplanned fun, determine the main things you want to see and do and exactly how long it takes to get from one to another. Then add a few days of uncommitted time to your vacation to enjoy some memorable side-pleasures.

* * *

Driving with your headlights on day as well as night is a good safety precaution in the heavy traffic of a holiday weekend—or anytime you're on the highway. It makes other motorists especially aware of you and reminds them to drive carefully. Their oncoming lights help break the monotony of driving for you, particularly if you're traveling a seemingly endless stretch of expressway.

* * *

Good vision is essential to good driving. Before taking the wheel, be sure your sight isn't impaired by . . .

- Lack of glasses or proper lenses. Have your eyes checked frequently, with special reference to driving. If you normally wear glasses, be sure you have prescription sunglasses, too.
- Sunglasses with elaborate sidepieces or with lenses in tints that distort shapes and distances. (Sage green and grey are the best lens-colors.)
- Objects on the rear-view mirror, stickers on the back window, items on the back deck that block the window.
- Faulty headlight beams. Beams need periodic adjustment so they throw maximum light at the proper angle to the road.

On long-distance trips, stop and rest—or change drivers—whenever your eyes begin to feel tired.

On The Fence Row

By Tom Brown

BLOOMFIELD -- Farmers who are not taking advantage of governmental cost - sharing assistance on the application of lime which is available through the Agricultural Conservation Program administered through the County A.S.C.S. office would still do well to apply lime according to soil test. A soil test is still the best guide to the application of lime.

According to Agricultural Conservation Program regulations governing cost-sharing assistance on lime, the farmer must maintain a conserving crop on the land for at least one crop year following the application of lime obtained through this program. The conserving crop may consist of lespediza during the current year on new or old stands of biennial or perennial grasses or perennial legumes, and the crop year is considered to be from May 15 to August 15 for this purpose. Of course, this presents no problem in cases when the land is to be used for conserving acres, a small grain-lespedeza combination or where new or existing stands of permanent pastures are to be maintained. Due to the complications involved in arranging row crop rotations to meet these requirements, a number of farmers are taking their Agricultural Conservation Program benefits in the form of other practices and are applying them at their own expense. In some such cases, farmers are reluctant to use a soil test as a guide to the application of this lime since no soil test would be required.

For best results the Ph level of the soil, which is an indicator of soil activity, should be around 6 to 6.5. It is at this level that the farmer realizes maximum benefits from most of the plant food elements with which he is concerned. Specifically, a Ph level of 6 to 6.5 is the most desirable range for maximum availability of, and reaction from, nitrogen, phosphate, potash, calcium, magnesium, molybdenum, manganese, copper, zinc, iron, and aluminum. If the need of our soil for lime is great enough, some of our plant food elements are tied up chemically in a form which is unavailable to plants, and some of the minor elements create a toxic condition in the soil which is harmful to crops. On the other hand, if we apply too much lime, we can create a soil condition in which plant food elements are limited in their availability to crops. A soil test is your best guide in determining the proper amount of lime to apply.

Lime is a tremendously important item in my soil fertility program. In fact, it should be considered basic to a fertility program since it governs the availability of other plant food elements through the correction of the soil acidity. Lime adds calcium and magnesium to the soil both of which are bacteria and speeds up the decomposition of crop residues which improves the physical condition of the soil and increases the release of nitrogen from the soil organic matter. It is therefore important that the soil be limed and in the proper amount.

Now is a good time to take soil tests and apply lime to those fields on which the crop situation is such that it would be practical to do so.

SLOW VOYAGES

Slow voyages in fast sailing ships were an unglamorous part of seafaring that seldom gets mentioned today in romantic writings about the windjammer era. Although ships like Flying Cloud occasionally might sail 15,000 miles New York-to-San Francisco in 80 days, or cross 3,150 miles to Liverpool in 13 days, those exhilarating speeds were rare. Most sailing was slow. One voyage in 1899 turned out to be so sluggish that for a while even maritime experts didn't believe it. On February 20 the able 1,600-ton ship Red Rock left Australia for a Pacific island port 950 miles distant across the Coral Sea. Weeks passed, then months, and she didn't arrive. Finally Lloyd's of London posted her as missing -- equivalent to declaring her sunk -- and her insurers made ready to pay off. A few days later, on June 12, she came into port, her crew weary and hungry on short rations. There had been no mishap; she had simply met constant head winds into which, like all vessels with square sails, she had little ability to tack. She had spent almost a third of a year --112 days -- beating from side to side to make good an advance of only 8 1/2 miles a day. By completing the slowest voyage on record, Red Rock became also the only ship that has survived a Lloyd's "missing" listing.

A Plane Crash . . . A Heroine's Medal

FORT SHAFTER, Hawaii (ANF)—A Women's Army Corps specialist has received the Soldier's Medal, a U. S. Army noncombat heroism award, for her rescue work following an airplane crash.

Sp5 Carrol Y. Picard of Livonia, La., aided an injured passenger and helped reduce the chance of fire after the Army aircraft in which she was riding crashed Dec. 18, 1964, during a flight from Fort Huachuca, Ariz., to Fort Bliss, Texas.

She and another passenger were injured when the plane crashed. The Soldier's Medal citation described Specialist Picard's actions:

"Without regard to her personal safety and injuries, she minimized the fire hazard in the fume-filled cabin by disabling the aircraft electrical system and, unassisted, extracted the unconscious passenger from the wreckage."

Sp5 Carrol Y. Picard

She then helped the semi-conscious passenger walk five miles through freezing weather to obtain medical aid. Specialist Picard has been a draftsman at Headquarters, U. S. Army, Pacific, since September 1966.

SWIMSUIT CHOICES — Summer's young fashionables can choose a bikini or a one-piece suit and still be in the swim of fashion, so long as the styling's feminine. Both looks are interpreted here in sheer dotted cotton, with color-on-white dots giving a frosted look. The shirt-styled cover-up teams with either suit. By Catalina.

QUICK TIPS for Smooth Trips

By Paula Johnson
Woman's Representative
American Oil Company

This summer most families will be exploring the country by car, largely because of the comfort and convenience auto travel offers. Discovering America can be even more fun and convenient with thorough advance planning, the kind that starts with a trip plan. You can order good plans—complete with marked maps; hotel, motel, and highway information, and expense-record forms—from major oil companies or tarough membership in organizations like the American Oil Motor Club.

Request that your maps show the scenic route if you really want to explore. Take a direct route back if you must, or an alternate scenic route if you have the time. Out-of-the-way places can add unprecedented pleasure and adventure to a trip. Your wandering needn't be haphazard, however. The second part of good planning is knowing where you can get accurate local information—at As You Travel service stations, for example, or the special tourist-information booths set up in many cities during the travel season. (The emergency information local sources have—where to find a good doctor, lawyer, or veterinarian, for instance—can be mighty helpful, too, if you suddenly need it.)

So you don't miss the unplanned fun, determine the main things you want to see and do and exactly how long it takes to get from one to another. Then add a few days of uncommitted time to your vacation to enjoy some memorable side-pleasures.

* * *

Driving with your headlights on day as well as night is a good safety precaution in the heavy traffic of a holiday weekend—or anytime you're on the highway. It makes other motorists especially aware of you and reminds them to drive carefully. Their oncoming lights help break the monotony of driving for you, particularly if you're traveling a seemingly endless stretch of expressway.

* * *

Good vision is essential to good driving. Before taking the wheel, be sure your sight isn't impaired by . . .

- Lack of glasses or proper lenses. Have your eyes checked frequently, with special reference to driving. If you normally wear glasses, be sure you have prescription sunglasses, too.
- Sunglasses with elaborate sidepieces or with lenses in tints that distort shapes and distances. (Sage green and grey are the best lens-colors.)
- Objects on the rear-view mirror, stickers on the back window, items on the back deck that block the window.
- Faulty headlight beams. Beams need periodic adjustment so they throw maximum light at the proper angle to the road.

On long-distance trips, stop and rest—or change drivers—whenever your eyes begin to feel tired.

On The Fence Row

By Tom Brown

BLOOMFIELD -- Farmers who are not taking advantage of governmental cost - sharing assistance on the application of lime which is available through the Agricultural Conservation Program administered through the County A.S.C.S. office would still do well to apply lime according to soil test. A soil test is still the best guide to the application of lime.

According to Agricultural Conservation Program regulations governing cost-sharing assistance on lime, the farmer must maintain a conserving crop on the land for at least one crop year following the application of lime obtained through this program. The conserving crop may consist of lespedeza during the current year on new or old stands of biennial or perennial grasses or perennial legumes, and the crop year is considered to be from May 15 to August 15 for this purpose. Of course, this presents no problem in cases when the land is to be used for conserving acres, a small grain-lespedeza combination or where new or existing stands of permanent pastures are to be maintained. Due to the complications involved in arranging row crop rotations to meet these requirements, a number of farmers are taking their Agricultural Conservation Program benefits in the form of other practices and are applying them at their own expense. In some such cases, farmers are reluctant to use a soil test as a guide to the application of this lime since no soil test would be required.

For best results the Ph level of the soil, which is an indicator of soil activity, should be around 6 to 6.5. It is at this level that the farmer realizes maximum benefits from most of the plant food elements with which he is concerned. Specifically, a Ph level of 6 to 6.5 is the most desirable range for maximum availability of, and reaction from, nitrogen, phosphate, potash, calcium, magnesium, molybdenum, manganese, copper, zinc, iron, and aluminum. If the need of our soil for lime is great enough, some of our plant food elements are tied up chemically in a form which is unavailable to plants, and some of the minor elements create a toxic condition in the soil which is harmful to crops. On the other hand, if we apply too much lime, we can create a soil condition in which plant food elements are limited in their availability to crops. A soil test is your best guide in determining the proper amount of lime to apply.

Lime is a tremendously important item in my soil fertility program. In fact, it should be considered basic to a fertility program since it governs the availability of other plant food elements through the correction of the soil acidity. Lime adds calcium and magnesium to the soil both of which are bacteria and speeds up the decomposition of crop residues which improves the physical condition of the soil and increases the release of nitrogen from the soil organic matter. It is therefore important that the soil be limed and in the proper amount.

Now is a good time to take soil tests and apply lime to those fields on which the crop situation is such that it would be practical to do so.

SLOW VOYAGES

Slow voyages in fast sailing ships were an unglamorous part of seafaring that seldom gets mentioned today in romantic writings about the windjammer era. Although ships like Flying Cloud occasionally might sail 15,000 miles New York-to-San Francisco in 80 days, or cross 3,150 miles to Liverpool in 13 days, those exhilarating speeds were rare. Most sailing was slow. One voyage in 1899 turned out to be so sluggish that for a while even maritime experts didn't believe it. On February 20 the able 1,600-ton ship Red Rock left Australia for a Pacific island port 950 miles distant across the Coral Sea. Weeks passed, then months, and she didn't arrive. Finally Lloyd's of London posted her as missing -- equivalent to declaring her sunk -- and her insurers made ready to pay off. A few days later, on June 12, she came into port, her crew weary and hungry on short rations. There had been no mishap; she had simply met constant head winds into which, like all vessels with square sails, she had little ability to tack. She had spent almost a third of a year --112 days -- beating from side to side to make good an advance of only 8 1/2 miles a day. By completing the slowest voyage on record, Red Rock became also the only ship that has survived a Lloyd's "missing" listing.

Ann Landers

There's Safety in Methodist Handshake

Dear Ann Landers: Your definition of a "Methodist handshake" brought back some wonderful memories.

Many years ago, when I was sweet 16, a handsome chap who was a couple of years older, asked me to go to the downtown recreation center. (In those days, this was considered a very special date.)

We played table tennis, did a little imitation tap dancing, and harmonized with the piano player who had a handlebar moustache. After a strawberry soda, we waltzed to phonograph music and called it the end of a wonderful evening. He took me home on the streetcar and I was in seventh heaven.

When we reached the front door he asked if he could kiss me good night. I replied, "No. My mother wouldn't think it was very ladylike."

He looked at me in astonishment and asked, "What kind of a mother do you have, anyway?" I replied, "My mother is a Methodist." He smiled and answered, "O.K., then. Give me a Methodist handshake."

I shook his hand and shut the door. We moved away shortly after that and I never saw him again, but I will always remember that wonderful "Methodist handshake." I had not heard the expression in 40 years and then it popped up in your column -- so thanks, for reviving some beautiful memories. -- OHIO

Dear Ohio: Thank you for a delightful letter. If more 1967 evenings ended with a Methodist handshake my mail would be a lot lighter.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a woman in my middle 20's who learned awfully late what life was all about.

Last winter I became ill and lost my job. A man I knew slightly took an interest in me. He helped out with the rent, paid my doctor bills and brought me groceries.

Gradually we drifted into an intimate relationship. He moved in and we are now living together. This man is everything I want in a husband. I love him very much and he says he loves me, but whenever I mention marriage he says he can't afford it.

How can I get him to make this arrangement legal? I want a family. --- WIFE WITHNONAME

Dear No Name: Stop begging. Tell the guy to move out immediately and let him know it's an order -- not a request. If you aren't back at work, you should be. Inform him there will be no more playing house until you are his legal wife.

If he doesn't come around to your way of thinking within three months, write him off and find someone whose ideas are more like yours.

Dear Ann Landers: We have a summer cottage and we enjoy company. But we can't afford to entertain people around the clock seven days a week.

Water skiing is the big thing in this area but some folks don't realize how much it costs to run a boat hour after hour. The oil and gas bills are murder. We hate to mention it because it might sound cheap. Any suggestions? --- TAPPED OUT

Dear Tapped: When you feel a certain group has had enough -- simply say, "Sorry, we're out of petrol, kiddies," and don't fill the tank until they leave.

Give in or lose him . . . when a guy gives you this line, look out! For tips on how to handle the super sex salesman, check Ann Landers. Read her booklet, "Necking and Petting -- What Are The Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

If You Were the Judge

Hotel Guest Entitled To Privacy Judge Rules

By Jack Strauss, LL.D.

Luscious Lucy went on a vacation to sightsee, but it was a bell-hop who got the view. Staying at an expensive and fancy hotel, she caught the bell-hop watching her undress from behind a door in her room.

Wrapped only in embarrassment, Lucy forced the intruder out of her room and then sued the hotel for damages.

"When a woman undresses in her hotel room," she complained in court, "she's entitled to have privacy."

"It's not our fault if a bell-hop turns out to be a Peeping Tom," was the hotel's defense. "Bellhops are hired to lug luggage and not to peer at their peers."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the hotel pay because an employee played hide and seek with Lucy?

This is how the judge ruled: Lucy collected. The judge held that an innkeeper is bound to exercise reasonable care that neither he nor his servants shall be uncivil or harsh to a guest; that it may be considered a breach of contract if guests do not receive decent and respectful treatment -- with due allowance being made for the grade of the hotel. The better the hotel, the better the treatment required.

Soybean Seed Certification to August 10

BLOOMFIELD -- Farmers, who are producing the new cyst nematode - resistant Pickett variety of soybeans will have until Aug. 10 to submit applications for certifying seed of this variety, according to Tom Brown, Stoddard county extension director and agricultural agent.

The Missouri Seed Improvement association has postponed the application deadline to this date after which a 20 per cent penalty will be added to application costs.

Word received from the Seed Improvement association indicates that of approximately 12,000 acres of Pickett soybeans being grown in this area, certification applications have been received for only 4,000 acres. In spite of the fact that three new nematode - resistant varieities including Pickett, Custer, and Dyer are being produced this year, indications are that there will only be enough seed of these varities to plant less than one-third of the soybean acreage next spring. Widespread occurance of new infestations of cyst nematode will result in increased demand for seed of these resitant varieities.

FARM MANAGEMENT

By Richard F. McIntosh
Ext. Farm Mgnt. Agent

BENTON -- Ordinarily the first year cyst nematodes are observed in a field, the infested area is quite small (1/4 to 1/2 acre). However, this doesn't seem to be the case this year. Both the number of new infestations and the amount of injury is more severe. Several farmers have reported having severe damage on 5 acres or more on fields that showed no infestation last year.

Some of these fields produced 40 bushels of beans per acre last year.

NEW INFESTATIONS

Usually new infestations will show up on the lighter sandy spots in the field. The plants will first appear yellow and stunted, later some of the lower leaves will die and eventually some of the plants will die. Those plants which survive remain severely stunted and produce few or no beans.

VERIFYING INFESTATIONS

Actually it is quite simple to verify cyst nematode infestations. Dig up some of the affected plants and gently shake the dirt off the root system. If cyst nematodes are present they can be observed, without magnification, attached to the feeder roots. This time of year the cysts appear lemon yellow in color on soybeans that were planted in May.

Those on soybeans planted after wheat are pearly white. The color pattern for cyst is pearly white early in the season, lemon yellow as the season progresses and brownish colored late in the season.

SPREAD

Nematodes can move through the soil only a few inches each year by their own efforts.

Anything that moves soil from one area to another can spread nematodes, (machinery, equipment, root crops, and even birds).

REDUCING LOSSES

The two most practical means of reducing losses are crop rotation and resistant varities.

Host plants to the soybean cyst nematodes are soybeans, lespedeza, common vetch, snap-beans, and adzukie beans.

The losses from cyst nematode can be reduced by planting the infested fields in cotton or corn for two, preferably three years.

THREE RESISTANT VARIETIES

In the long run, resistant varieties are the most logical and practical means of eliminating losses.

At the present time the supply of nematode resistant seed is being expanded for three varieties. the following is a brief varietal description of these three:

PICKETT: Is yellow-seeded. It has purple flowers and gray pubescence. Yields have been satisfactory on cyst infested soil. It is resistant to bacterial postule, wildfire and target spot. It is NOT resistant to phytophthora root rot. It matures the last week in October. It was derived from a Lee back crossing program.

This year there were approximately 11,000 bushel of seed available for planting.

CUSTER: It was developed by the back crossing system using Scott as its main parent. Custer is similar to Scott in maturity (the first week in October) lodging, plant height and seed quality. It has purple flowers, gray pubesence, and yellow seeds with imperfect black hila.

Custer has resistance to phytophthora root rot. Yields have been comparable to Scott at the Delta Center at Portageville, Mo.

There were approximately 2,000 bu. planted in Missouri this year.

DYER: It is very similar to the Hill variety being approximately 5 days later, carrying resistance to the soybean cyst nematode and root knot nematode.

Yields of Dyer have been 2 to 3 bushels above Hill on loam soil at Portageville. On cyst nematode infested soil at Ridgely, Tennessee, yields were 45% greater than Hill during 1964-65, and at Portageville during 1966. Yields have been below Hill on heavy clay soil, where phytophthora root rot is a problem. It has purple flowers and tawny pubescence. The seed are yellow with black hila. There were only 725 bushels planted in Missouri this year.

Caste System

Traditionally, India's caste system was conceived to segregate Aryan conquerors from the aboriginal Dravidians and developed into a division of labor. Brahmans were the priests and scholars. Kshatriyas the warriors. Vaisyas the merchants and Sudras the workers. The untouchables were beyond caste and were condemned to the most menial tasks.

Ann Landers

There's Safety in Methodist Handshake

Dear Ann Landers: Your definition of a "Methodist handshake" brought back some wonderful memories.

Many years ago, when I was sweet 16, a handsome chap who was a couple of years older, asked me to go to the downtown recreation center. (In those days, this was considered a very special date.)

We played table tennis, did a little imitation tap dancing, and harmonized with the piano player who had a handlebar moustache. After a strawberry soda, we waltzed to phonograph music and called it the end of a wonderful evening. He took me home on the streetcar and I was in seventh heaven.

When we reached the front door he asked if he could kiss me good night. I replied, "No. My mother wouldn't think it was very ladylike."

He looked at me in astonishment and asked, "What kind of a mother do you have, anyway?" I replied, "My mother is a Methodist." He smiled and answered, "O.K., then. Give me a Methodist handshake."

I shook his hand and shut the door. We moved away shortly after that and I never saw him again, but I will always remember that wonderful "Methodist handshake." I had not heard the expression in 40 years and then it popped up in your column -- so thanks, for reviving some beautiful memories. -- OHIO

Dear Ohio: Thank you for a delightful letter. If more 1967 evenings ended with a Methodist handshake my mail would be a lot lighter.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a woman in my middle 20's who learned awfully late what life was all about.

Last winter I became ill and lost my job. A man I knew slightly took an interest in me. He helped out with the rent, paid my doctor bills and brought me groceries.

Gradually we drifted into an intimate relationship. He moved in and we are now living together. This man is everything I want in a husband. I love him very much and he says he loves me, but whenever I mention marriage he says he can't afford it.

How can I get him to make this arrangement legal? I want a family. -- WIFE WITHNONAME

Dear No Name: Stop begging. Tell the guy to move out immediately and let him know it's an order -- not a request. If you aren't back at work, you should be. Inform him there will be no more playing house until you are his legal wife.

If he doesn't come around to your way of thinking within three months, write him off and find someone whose ideas are more like yours.

Dear Ann Landers: We have a summer cottage and we enjoy company. But we can't afford to entertain people around the clock seven days a week.

Water skiing is the big thing in this area but some folks don't realize how much it costs to run a boat hour after hour. The oil and gas bills are murder. We hate to mention it because it might sound cheap. Any suggestions? -- TAPPED OUT

Dear Tapped: When you feel a certain group has had enough -- simply say, "Sorry, we're out of petrol, kiddies," and don't fill the tank until they leave.

Give in or lose him . . . when a guy gives you this line, look out! For tips on how to handle the super sex salesman, check Ann Landers. Read her booklet, "Necking and Petting -- What Are The Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

North of the Mathis residence on Scott street, the six - room house of John Spence caught on fire after volunteers worked fruitlessly for 30 minutes to save it.

If You Were the Judge

Hotel Guest Entitled To Privacy Judge Rules

By Jack Strauss, LL.D.

Luscious Lucy went on a vacation to sightsee, but it was a bellhop who got the view. Staying at an expensive and fancy hotel, she caught the bell-hop watching her undress from behind a door in her room.

Wrapped only in embarrassment, Lucy forced the intruder out of her room and then sued the hotel for damages.

"When a woman undresses in her hotel room," she complained in court, "she's entitled to have privacy."

"It's not our fault if a bell-hop turns out to be a Peeping Tom," was the hotel's defense. "Bellhops are hired to lug luggage and not to peer at their peers."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the hotel pay because an employee played hide and seek with Lucy?

This is how the judge ruled: Lucy collected. The judge held that an innkeeper is bound to exercise reasonable care that neither he nor his servants shall be uncivil or harsh to a guest; that it may be considered a breach of contract if guests do not receive decent and respectful treatment -- with due allowance being made for the grade of the hotel. The better the hotel, the better the treatment required.

Soybean Seed Certification to August 10

BLOOMFIELD -- Farmers, who are producing the new cyst nematode - resistant Pickett variety of soybeans will have until Aug. 10 to submit applications for certifying seed of this variety, according to Tom Brown, Stoddard county extension director and agricultural agent.

The Missouri Seed Improvement association has postponed the application deadline to this date after which a 20 per cent penalty will be added to application costs.

Word received from the Seed Improvement association indicates that of approximately 12,000 acres of Pickett soybeans being grown in this area, certification applications have been received for only 4,000 acres. In spite of the fact that three new nematode - resistant varieties including Pickett, Custer, and Dyer are being produced this year, indications are that there will only be enough seed of these varities to plant less than one-third of the soybean acreage next spring. Widespread occurance of new infestations of cyst nematode will result in increased demand for seed of these resistant varieities.

FARM MANAGEMENT

By Richard F. McIntosh
Ext. Farm Mgnt, Agent

BENTON -- Ordinarily the first year cyst nematodes are observed in a field, the infested area is quite small (1/4 to 1/2 acre). However, this doesn't seem to be the case this year. Both the number of new infestations and the amount of injury is more severe. Several farmers have reported having severe damage on 5 acres or more on fields that showed no infestation last year.

Some of these fields produced 40 bushels of beans per acre last year.

NEW INFESTATIONS

Usually new infestations will show up on the lighter sandy spots in the field. The plants will first appear yellow and stunted, later some of the lower leaves will die and eventually some of the plants will die. Those plants which survive remain severely stunted and produce few or no beans.

VERIFYING INFESTATIONS

Actually it is quite simple to verify cyst nematode infestations. Dig up some of the affected plants and gently shake the dirt off the root system. If cyst nematodes are present they can be observed, without magnification, attached to the feeder roots. This time of year the cysts appear lemon yellow in color on soybeans that were planted in May.

Those on soybeans planted after wheat are pearly white. The color pattern for cyst is pearly white early in the season, lemon yellow as the season progresses and brownish colored late in the season.

SPREAD

Nematodes can move through the soil only a few inches each year by their own efforts.

Anything that moves soil from one area to another can spread nematodes, (machinery, equipment, root crops, and even birds).

REDUCING LOSSES

The two most practical means of reducing losses are crop rotation and resistant varitties.

Host plants to the soybean cyst nematodes are soybeans, lespedeza, common vetch, snap-beans, and adzukie beans.

The losses from cyst nematode can be reduced by planting the infested fields in cotton or corn for two, preferably three years.

THREE RESISTANT VARIETIES

In the long run, resistant varieties are the most logical and practical means of eliminating losses.

At the present time the supply of nematode resistant seed is being expanded for three varieties, the following is a brief varietal description of these three:

PICKETT: Is yellow-seeded. It has purple flowers and gray pubescence. Yields have been satisfactory on cyst infested soil. It is resistant to bacterial postule, wildfire and target spot. It is NOT resistant to phytophthora root rot. It matures the last week in October. It was derived from a Lee back crossing program.

This year there were approximately 11,000 bushel of seed available for planting.

CUSTER: It was developed by the back crossing system using Scott as its main parent. Custer is similar to Scott in maturity (the first week in October) lodging, plant height and seed quality. It has purple flowers, gray pubesence, and yellow seeds with imperfect black hila.

Custer has resistance to phytophthora root rot. Yields have been comparable to Scott at the Delta Center at Portageville, Mo.

There were approximately 2,000 bu. planted in Missouri this year.

DYER: It is very similar to the Hill variety being approximately 5 days later, carrying resistance to the soybean cyst nematode and root knot nematode.

Yields of Dyer have been 2 to 3 bushels above Hill on loam soil at Portageville. On cyst nematode infested soil at Ridgely, Tennessee, yields were 45% greater than Hill during 1964-65, and at Portageville during 1966. Yields have been below Hill on heavy clay soil, where phytophthora root rot is a problem. It has purple flowers and tawny pubescence. The seed are yellow with black hila. There were only 725 bushels planted in Missouri this year.

Caste System

Traditionally, India's caste system was conceived to segregate Aryan conquerors from the aboriginal Dravidians and developed into a division of labor. Brahmans were the priests and scholars. Kshatriyas the warriors. Vaisyas the merchants and Sudras the workers. The untouchables were beyond caste and were condemned to the most menial tasks.

IT WOULD BE TOUGH DRIVING WITHOUT SIGNS...

You'd never get anywhere on today's complicated system of roads if you didn't have familiar signs to tell you where you're going and how to get there safely.

But shopping for your family is a lot more complicated than driving your car. And here, too, you couldn't get along without the guideposts—the manufacturers' brand names you know and trust.

Advertised brands have to be good. The manufacturer's reputation and sales future depend upon consistently delivering the kind of quality and satisfaction you've learned to expect.

They're the sort of products advertised in this newspaper. They're the sort of products you can buy with confidence in today's complicated world.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1858, the first transatlantic cable was completed.

On this date:

In 1861, the U.S. government levied its first income tax.

In 1876, the Western marshal known as "Wild Bill" Hickock was killed in a Deadwood, S.D., saloon.

In 1884, the cornerstorne of the Statue of Liberty was laid at the entrance to New York Harbor.

In 1949, an earthquake in Ecuador left some 6,000 dead.

In 1963, the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union signed a treaty in Moscow outlawing nuclear tests in the atmosphere, in space and underseas.

Ten years ago— Britain signed an agreement in Kuala Lumpur giving up control over Malaya.

One year ago — Gov. Frank Clement of Tennessee defeated Ross Bass to win the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate.

"Cold Feet"

The expression, "cold feet," meaning fear, started with soldiers in the 19th century. One of the chief ailments in battle was frozen feet, but it was also said that some soldiers feigned the trouble to avoid battle.

August Will Be Cool and Wet

PORTAGEVILLE -- August weather will be cooler and wetter than normal according to the 30-day weather outlook for the Bootheel.

While centers of high pressure moving out of Canada should remain north of the region, cool air will be pulled southward in sufficient quantities to depress temperatures often enough to lower averages for the month below the 79.1 degree normal for the bootheel.

High pressure is not expected to be as dominant as usual across the southern states, leaving an opening for Gulf warmth and moisture to flow northward through the lower Mississippi Valley. The Bootheel lies on the northern fringe of an area expected to receive more than normal rainfall in August. Much of this can be looked for in showers and thunderstorms preceding and accompanying invasions of cool air.

Long term records for the Bootheel in previous Augusts with heavy precipitation show averages of 7 inches for Poplar Bluff, 6.97 inches for Sikeston and 6.18 inches for Caruthersville. Monthly totals range from 4.20 inches to 14.58, with all three stations reporting heaviest accumulations in 1915, not 1957.

Normal rainfall for August over the Bootheel as a whole is 3.19 inches. Normals for individual cities run in Cape Girardeau, 3.73 inches; Dexter, 3.44 inches; Morehouse 3.13 inches; Parma, 3.30 inches; Sikeston, 2.92 inches; Caruthersville, 3.04 inches; Doniphan, 3.61 inches; New Madrid, 3.09 inches and Poplar Bluff, 3.12 inches.

Short term averages for other cities are Advance, 3.08 inches; Bloomfield, 2.84 inches; Clearwater Dam, 3.05 inches; Kennett, 3.29 inches; Portageville, 2.94 inches; Qulin, 2.12 inches; Bernie, 2.62 inches; Charleston, 2.91 inches; Deering, 2.60 inches; Malden, 2.26 inches; Puxico, 2.55 inches and Wappapello Dam, 2.47 inches.

Normally evaporation and plant use demands about 3 inches more water than is provided by rain. This would make irrigation a beneficial and necessary requirement for soybeans and cotton. August is not likely to show as high a moisture deficit, particularly since soil moisture storage is in good supply in many sections. Exceptions may arise on sandier soils and in areas where July rainfall was limited.

Rain totals for Bootheel cities in July were: Poplar Bluff, 2.02 inches; Caruthersville, 6.40 inches; Sikeston, 3.49 inches; Kennett, 4.96 inches; Charleston, 3.55 inches; Portageville, 5.80 inches and Hayward, 5.22 inches.

Weather records tend to show that in an August with heavy rainfall we can expect as many as 2 to 4 days with rainfall greater than one inch. In general 10 to 13 days with rain in some amount is usual in a wet August. More cloudiness than usual is also indicated which will further tend to reduce temperature stresses and water use by plants.

Late cotton, maintained in a vegetative and fruiting stage by moist conditions may be more susceptible than usual to bollworm damage for a longer period this season. A regular check of fields would be beneficial and farmers should check recommendations of Extension Directors regarding control measures. Forecasts will permit maximum use of dry weather for scheduling controls, particularly if wet fields require aerial applications. The Flying Farmer Forecast issued each morning and evening will be helpful in determining whether winds or low clouds may limit the hours in which applications will be most likely to reach the target. The five day outlook is a good guide for scheduling applications for maximum retention of chemicals between rains.

Hay cutting and field curing, as well as preparation and fertilizing of pasture land for seeding later this fall can often be worked in between rains if forecasts and 5 day outlooks are used carefully. These are not sure cures for wet weather problems, but your chances for success are much greater when an operation is scheduled during periods with low probability of showery conditions.

Remember, too, that some of the thunderstorm activity anticipated during August might produce damaging winds or severe electrical disturbances. Swimmers, boating enthusiasts and fishermen can avoid potential hazards by moving off the water at the first sign of approaching storms. Forecasts can alert you to the chance for thunderstorms, and well-developed, dark clouds can be detected well in advance of their arrival.

Man Claims No Knowledge of Political Race

DETROIT (AP)— A Missouri sharecropper's son who says he's never been to school and never ran for election has been charged with failing to file a record of campaign expenses.

Circuit Judge George Bowles, Wayne County (Detroit) one-man grand jury, indicted James G. Williams.

Williams made no plea at his arraignment Thursday before Common Pleas Judge John D. O'Hair. He was released on personal bond to await trial Aug. 10.

The warrant filed by Bowles charges Williams failed to file "a full and true" account of his expenses in an unsuccessful race for auditor Aug. 2, 1966. The charge is a misdemeanor, punishable by two years in jail, $1,000 fine or both.

Williams came to court clutching a copy of the indictment and said he knew nothing about his name being on the ballot. He said he has trouble reading and writing.

"I don't even know what an auditor is," said Williams, "I'm just dumb to it. I don't have any education."

Williams, a paper hanger and painter, said he, his wife and six children are supported by $312 a month in welfare checks.

One day, Williams said, he was painting a man's house when the man had Williams sign some papers. Williams said he he thought he was helping the man run for political office.

James Williams finished 17th in a field of 19, getting more than 3,000 votes in the election.

Farm Mishap Fatal to Man

CAPE GIRARDEAU - A farm accident Thursday afternoon took the life of Henry M. Gafford, 58, rural Jackson.

Gafford was killed when a tractor and brush hog mower he was operating on the Donald Oliver farm near Fruitland overturned, pinning him beneath.

Death is thought to have occurred about 4:45 p.m. Cape Girardeau County Coroner Donald Kremer said.

Kremer reported that Emmet Fallon, also of Jackson had talked to Gafford about 4 p.m. while he was mowing.

Fallon returned to the area about 5:30 p.m. to check on Gafford and found him beneath the equipment.

Both worked on the farm. Gafford had been assistant foreman since 1964.

Coroner Kremer said the accident apparently occurred as Gafford was driving the tractor and mower down a hill. One wheel dropped into a hole, causing them to overturn.

No inquest will be held, the coroner said.

August Will Be Cool and Wet

PORTAGEVILLE -- August weather will be cooler and wetter than normal according to the 30-day weather outlook for the Bootheel.

While centers of high pressure moving out of Canada should remain north of the region, cool air will be pulled southward in sufficient quantities to depress temperatures often enough to lower averages for the month below the 79.1 degree normal for the bootheel.

High pressure is not expected to be as dominant as usual across the southern states, leaving an opening for Gulf warmth and moisture to flow northward through the lower Mississippi Valley. The Bootheel lies on the northern fringe of an area expected to receive more than normal rainfall in August. Much of this can be looked for in showers and thunderstorms preceding and accompanying invasions of cool air.

Long term records for the Bootheel in previous Augusts with heavy precipitation show averages of 7 inches for Poplar Bluff, 6.97 inches for Sikeston and 6.18 inches for Caruthersville. Monthly totals range from 4.20 inches to 14.58, with all three stations reporting heaviest accumulations in 1915, not 1957.

Normal rainfall for August over the Bootheel as a whole is 3.19 inches. Normals for individual cities run in Cape Girardeau, 3.73 inches; Dexter, 3.44 inches; Morehouse 3.13 inches; Parma, 3.30 inches; Sikeston, 2.92 inches; Caruthersville, 3.04 inches; Doniphan, 3.61 inches; New Madrid, 3.09 inches and Poplar Bluff, 3.12 inches.

Short term averages for other cities are Advance, 3.08 inches; Bloomfield, 2.84 inches; Clearwater Dam, 3.05 inches; Kennett, 3.29 inches; Portageville, 2.94 inches; Qulin, 2.12 inches; Bernie, 2.62 inches; Charleston, 2.91 inches; Deering, 2.60 inches; Malden, 2.26 inches; Puxico, 2.55 inches and Wappapello Dam, 2.47 inches.

Normally evaporation and plant use demands about 3 inches more water than is provided by rain. This would make irrigation a beneficial and necessary requirement for soybeans and cotton. August is not likely to show as high a moisture deficit, particularly since soil moisture storage is in good supply in many sections. Exceptions may arise on sandier soils and in areas where July rainfall was limited.

Rain totals for Bootheel cities in July were: Poplar Bluff, 2.02 inches; Caruthersville, 6.40 inches; Sikeston, 3.49 inches; Kennett, 4.96 inches; Charleston, 3.55 inches; Portageville, 5.80 inches and Hayward, 5.22 inches.

Weather records tend to show that in an August with heavy rainfall we can expect as many as 2 to 4 days with rainfall greater than one inch. In general 10 to 13 days with rain in some amount is usual in a wet August. More cloudiness than usual is also indicated which will further tend to reduce temperature stresses and water use by plants.

Late cotton, maintained in a vegetative and fruiting stage by moist conditions may be more susceptible than usual to bollworm damage for a longer period this season. A regular check of fields would be beneficial and farmers should check recommendations of Extension Directors regarding control measures. Forecasts will permit maximum use of dry weather for scheduling controls, particularly if wet fields require aerial applications. The Flying Farmer Forecast issued each morning and evening will be helpful in determining whether winds or low clouds may limit the hours in which applications will be most likely to reach the target. The five day outlook is a good guide for scheduling applications for maximum retention of chemicals between rains.

Hay cutting and field curing, as well as preparation and fertilizing of pasture land for seeding later this fall can often be worked in between rains if forecasts and 5 day outlooks are used carefully. These are not sure cures for wet weather problems, but your chances for success are much greater when an operation is scheduled during periods with low probability of showery conditions.

Remember, too, that some of the thunderstorm activity anticipated during August might produce damaging winds or severe electrical disturbances. Swimmers, boating enthusiasts and fishermen can avoid potential hazards by moving off the water at the first sign of approaching storms. Forecasts can alert you to the chance for thunderstorms, and well-developed, dark clouds can be detected well in advance of their arrival.

Man Claims No Knowledge of Political Race

DETROIT (AP)-- A Missouri sharecropper's son who says he's never been to school and never ran for election has been charged with failing to file a record of campaign expenses.

Circuit Judge George Bowles, Wayne County (Detroit) one-man grand jury, indicted James G. Williams.

Williams made no plea at his arraignment Thursday before Common Pleas Judge John D. O'Hair. He was released on personal bond to await trial Aug. 10.

The warrant filed by Bowles charges Williams failed to file "a full and true" account of his expenses in an unsuccessful race for auditor Aug. 2, 1966. The charge is a misdemeanor, punishable by two years in jail, $1,000 fine or both.

Williams came to court clutching a copy of the indictment and said he knew nothing about his name being on the ballot. He said he has trouble reading and writing.

"I don't even know what an auditor is," said Williams, "I'm just dumb to it. I don't have any education."

Williams, a paper hanger and painter, said he, his wife and six children are supported by $312 a month in welfare checks.

One day, Williams said, he was painting a man's house when the man had Williams sign some papers. Williams said he he thought he was helping the man run for political office.

James Williams finished 17th in a field of 19, getting more than 3,000 votes in the election.

Farm Mishap Fatal to Man

CAPE GIRARDEAU - A farm accident Thursday afternoon took the life of Henry M. Gafford, 58, rural Jackson.

Gafford was killed when a tractor and brush hog mower he was operating on the Donald Oliver farm near Fruitland overturned, pinning him beneath.

Death is thought to have occurred about 4:45 p.m. Cape Girardeau County Coroner Donald Kremer said.

Kremer reported that Emmet Fallon, also of Jackson had talked to Gafford about 4 p.m. while he was mowing.

Fallon returned to the area about 5:30 p.m. to check on Gafford and found him beneath the equipment.

Both worked on the farm. Gafford had been assistant foreman since 1964.

Coroner Kremer said the accident apparently occurred as Gafford was driving the tractor and mower down a hill. One wheel dropped into a hole, causing them to overturn.

No inquest will be held, the coroner said.
